ARRIVAL OF THE EUROPA.

LONDON, January 8, 1858.

The leading column in the daily papers yesterday morning, headed, "Death of General Havelock" plunged all England into sorrow. In previous accounts he was reported to be ill, and much anxiety was occasioned; but the public at large were wholly unprepared for the tidings which have now arrived. Lucknow at length in which have now arrived. Lucknow at length in his power and its garrison liberated, the aim of months of excitement, exposure and fatigue, months of excitement, exposure and fatigue, such as few men had ever previously sustained, was accomplished, and the sudden re-action has struck the blow against which throughout all his trials in action he appeared to be proof. In his trials in action he appeared to be proof. In a little more than a week after his final victory he sank from dysentery, his death having occurred on the 25th of Nov., at the age of 63. Upon the mind of every true and brave man in the world it will fall like a personal loss. I will not be given to few, however, to pass away at the hour of their greatness, and to the satisfaction to conclude their work and know that he had done his work and that he died with the full consciousness of having been supported by Providence to the crowning point of a career which has made him one of the illustrious men of the age.

The same despatch brings us other important news, subsequently wiped out, however, with four-fold success. It will be remembered that when Sir Colin Campbell marched from Cawnpore to the relief of Havelock, he left that place in charge of General Windham, with a small force. Immediately after his departure it was threatened by a large body of mutineers, 2,000 strong, known as the Gwalior contingents, but upon General Windham making preparations to attack them they appeared as suddenly as they retreated now seems that they must have remained, and now seems that they must have remained, and that they must either have assumed the offensive, or have had some deep plan to induce him to march out upon them. All that is known is that a conflict took place, in which the British retreated, with the loss of all their tents and several hundred men.

The force of the enemy was that of a regular army. They had thoroughly preserved their discipline and had an excellent proportion both of cavalry and artillery. Against their total of 8000 the number under Windham is supposed by some to have been 2000, but among the India directors in London the impression is that it will prove to have been less. All points of detail, however, must remain in uncertainty for nearly a week, as the mail is not expected to be received before the 13th at the earliest; but every theless it is known that Sir Colin Campbell lost no time in repairing to the scene of misfortune, and that he at once turned the scale, gaining apparently one of the most decisive victories yet achieved with singularly small loss on our side. "It is stated that the defeat of the mutineers was fully that they lost sixteen guns, immense quantities of ammunition, abundant stores, and the whole of their baggage."

This battle occurred, it is supposed, about the 6th or 7th of December. General Windham's repulse having been sustained ten days previously. To reach Cawnpore, Sir Colin Campbell must have retired from Lucknow immediately on the news reaching him, but this movement is believed to have been previously resolved upon and was therefore merely hastened. That it took place without inconvenience may be inferred from the fact that all the women, children and sick are announced to have safely arrived at Allahabad, where there is regular steam communication with Calcutta.

At present it would be premature to enter into conjectures as to the cause of General Windham's reverse. He had no reputation as a tactician, his recent promotion having been solely gained by personal bravery in the attack on the Redan at Sebastopol. On his leaving England he was entrusted with no separate command.

It appears that the only [illegible] against the priests in the late [illegible] is the Mahistry will have a clear majority, while in the last chamber the reactionary party had a majority of 16. From Saturday's [illegible] state the total number of bodies dug out after the recent earthquake in various places to have reached 3,000. A general impression prevails that the loss of life altogether may be estimated at between 12,000 and 14,000 persons.

On Tuesday last, the 5th instant, General Radetsky died at Milan, at the age of 91. Notwithstanding his extraordinary years he was hourly be said to have died of old age, since the accident by which he broke his thigh about a year ago was the first serious illness of his lifetime, and his last symptoms were of a rather acute character from affection of the heart.

Another death has also been announced of Middle. Rachel, at Cannes, in France, at the age of 37. This event, which had been long expected, took place on the 3d instant. The interval between her first appearance on the stage and the date of her death was just twenty years.

Much satisfaction has been occasioned by the publication of a notice issued by Sir John Lawrence from his seat of government in the Punjaub, that the timid policy hitherto pursued in India with regard to Christianity will cease; at Hitherto there must India, in order to pander to native prejudices, the employment of Christians in the Government service has been uniformly discouraged. Sir John Lawrence has now boldly taked upon himself to intimate not only that this system will henceforth be totally reversed, but that he would have abrogated it long ago but for the knowledge that such a course would have been countermanded by the account of religious opinion, but that Christianity shall at least have the same field as every other.

The launching of the Leviathan in the Thames near London, is still going on, and at last some progress is again being made. The probability seems that in the course of a few days she will be fairly afloat. The operation will have cost a sum equal to at least $600,000. Some weeks ago a Mr. Dant Russell, who lately recovered the royal mail steamer Tyne, after she had been grounded on the coast of Dorsetshire, and the Golden Age, which went ashore on her passage between San Francisco and Panama, offered to launch her for $200,000, but Mr. Brunel, the engineer, preferred his own grand and extra scientific plans.

A party of 31 radical members of Parliament are endeavoring to get up an opposition to Lord Palmerston's intended reform bill, on the ground of its insufficiency, even before they have learnt what it is, the proposition that is to be contained in it. A straight-forward Bill, for the total abolition of the ballot on the Australian plan, triennial elections and a re-apportionment of seats on the number of members should be in proportion to the population of each district. These plans are spacious, but highly inapplicable, and are not likely, except in a modified form, to meet with approval from the public at large.

The Bank of England have reduced their rate of discount from 8 per cent. to 6 per cent. The measure had been regarded as certain, and therefore produced no effect. In the open market discount can be readily obtained at from 5 to 5½ per cent. The discount brokers, as well as the two leading joint stock banks, have put down their rates for money at call to 4½ and 4 per cent.

A loan for sum equal to $40,000,000 is thought likely to be raised after the meeting of Parliament for the service of the India Company, but the proceeds will be expended for payments due in this country, and the operation therefore will have no great influence on the money market.

Since the above was written, the death has been announced of Redschid Pasha, the Turkish Prime Minister, and the most liberal statesman in that country, at the age of 66. SPECTATOR.

GREAT BRITAIN.—Operations were resumed upon the Leviathan on the 5th inst. with success, the vessel being moved several feet. The proceedings were continued daily up to the departure of the Europa, the progress each day amounting to eight or ten feet. The evening before the Europa sailed the ship had only 64 feet more to be moved.

The returns of employment in the cotton mills of Manchester, show a gratifying improvement, the number of hands working full time being largely on the increase.

The Daily News says that Lord Palmerston's forthcoming India bill will transfer the direct management of the political affairs of India to a Cabinet Minister, who it is understood, shall be a Peer, and in whom all patronage---with one exception---is to be vested. This member of the Cabinet is to be president of a council of six, who are to have simply consultative function. The European portion of the Indian army is to be greatly augmented, and all regulations regarding it are to emanate from the Horse Guards. The same journal intimates that Lord Clanricarde is to be the first Minister for India under the new arrangement.

Very Late from Utah.

We have had an interview with a gentleman who had just arrived in this city from California and Salt Lake City direct, having left the Mormon head-quarters on the 10th of December---a date fully one month later than previous advices.

Our informant started from San Francisco on the 15th November, for Salt Lake, intending to proceed thence to the States. He remained for some days in the Mormon Territory. Stopping at San Bernardino, on the way to Utah, he there had an interview with Captain Hunt and other Mormon leaders, who were crowded with business, in making preparations for the emigration of the whole Mormon population from that country to Great Salt Lake City.

The Mormons in that region were selling off their farms, mills, workshops, &c., at great sacrifices. Six months ago the same property could not have been purchased for ten times the prices now accepted. Everything they possessed was for sale, save the means of transporting them to the spot of their hopes, and the etceteras required on the journey.

In eleven days from San Bernardino the party arrived at Coal Creek settlement, and left, the next morning, for Great Salt Lake City, passing through Parowan Fort, a small settlement on the Beaver River, Fillmore City, Lehigh, Semnit Creek, Petenete, Spanish Fork, Provo City and other small villages, arriving at the City on the 5th of December, having made the journey in seventy days.

From the time they entered on the Santa Clara River, (about eighty miles from the first Mormon settlement,) they met numerous bands of the Pinte Indians, who were well armed, pretty comfortably attired, and apparently on very good terms with the Mormons. They likewise passed through bands of the Utes, many of were living close to the settlements.

The Indians spoke tolerably good English.

There is no question but the Mormons in all the settlements are fully posted on the war question, and the Indians seem quite as much interested as they are. They have rubbed up their firearms, cleaned their locks, and are particularly sparing in the use of powder and lead.

In the settlements south of Great Salt Lake City the Mormons were united, and very busy threshing their grain, which they had in great abundance from the last harvest.

The suffering among the United States troops was, naturally enough, a subject for congratulation in the city, when friends met. The people believe in the entire destruction of the troops now at the foot of the mountains and as many more as may join them in the Spring; not by the superior human force which may be brought to oppose their entrance into the valleys; but by the exercise of "the Almighty's power." The Mormons see no possibility of the troops ever getting in, though the valleys should be besieged on every side. The narrow defiles must be passed, in which bodies of men can be awfully harassed by guerrilla parties, and for that business there were ready and well-skilled. They have strongly fortified Echo Canon---as the reports of the spies are now in that direction; but every other entrance will be made a place of defence before the summer. Every able-bodied man will be in the spring crops, and they say that in the time of harvest---if the men cannot return---the women and the rising generation, together with "their fathers in Israel," will lend their aid. Many of the women are not over-delicate in frame. Many of them, natives of Europe, have been accustomed in the work of the field and garden, and understand the work of ploughing and hoeing, so that, under the actual supervision of Brigham there is little doubt that much of the harvest, if not all, will be secured.

An open fight is not counted upon, but every other means of crippling the Army will be resorted to, if cessation of supplies will effect it.

Should the Army still be resolved to, it becomes a matter of life and death.

The party left the City on the 10th of December, at 10 in the morning, crossed the Little Mountain, and camped in the snow at the foot of the Big Mountain, about twenty miles from the City. There was no grass, so that they had to depend on oats for the cattle during the first day out. The next day they crossed the Big Mountain, and went to the Weber River, where there was grass and abundance of wood for camp fires. Echo-Canon. They had a permit to go through the canon, and concluded that if the Mormons continue the labors they have commenced there, it will be a fine "path to glory" in the Spring. The sn
