While Mr. Buchanan in knee-breeches and silk stockings was living in inglorious ease at the Court of St. James, and dancing attendance upon my Lord This-and-that at some empty royal ceremony, the people of Kansas were have been often at Harrisburg will appreciate defending their firesides and their families from the value of the compliment we pay the House the raids of maranders, were baring their when we say that the table was not only abun bosoms to the knives of ruffians backed by the dantly but richly furnished. It is in this, as in power of an administration only less unjust than the present; and yet he coully tells these men and the people of these States that they are laboring under treast delegation in the country of the count laboring under "great delusion" in this whole that town) of being thoroughly pleased with question! The people of Kansas are outraged the entertainment. by being told that ever since his inauguration, to the 4th day of January, 1858, that system has been practised; and it has in every case prevailed except in the October election of 1867, when Governor Walker took the responsibility of checking and thwarting it, and paved the way to his own dismissal from office. It was this fraud, this iniquitous accursed fraud, out of which the Lecompton Constitution sprang; and it is this fraudulent origin of the whole production, and not this or that particular feature, that to the 4th day of January, 1858, that system d

Does the calm yet earnest voice of the venerable Stateman speak in that paper, pleading for the rights which the people of this country regard as their heir loon, and which all their institutions, even the Nebraska act, recognize and guarantee? Does the President of the United State speak—the man, who, from his place, and by his solemn eath, is bound to look to the whole country, disregarding the interests of factions, of parties and of sections? Is there even an impartial statement of facts? Nay, is there any approach to fairness in presenting a subject of such virial statement of facts? So far from these, or any one of these, the measage has not aven the fallacious appearance of fairness. It is evident from the very outset that the President presents everything that makes against his case; to assort roundly where facts and arguments fall; and to resort to such shifts as quoting the letters of Gov. Walker in a connection where they do not at all bear on the real issue. Why are these quotations of the Ex-Governor's infroduced?—To divert attention, to eke out the measage, to justify the President for keeping the troops in Kansas, or to prejudice Walker. Certain it is they have no virtue to determine whether on not the Lecompton Constitution should be not capted or rejected."

No document ever emanated from the Presidential massion that has been received with such a burst of honest indignation as the late weeks go on the Kareas question. It is a paper that will confer on Mr. Buchansu an infamy that will outlive all his other political actions.

Finally, after every one had grown hoarse through excited shouting, and had tired of the sickening noise and confusion, the President, with his feeble voice, begged the members to take their seats, and for their own credit, and that of the party, to preserve order. He hoped to see no repetition of such an unparalleled and disgraceful exhibition." great pleasure in saying to you that I made use of Boerhav Holland Bitters, and found apparent relief, of a severe he

After a while it was whispered about that Rice, of the Pennylvonian, was endeavoring to exert an undue influence in the Convention by means of people smuggled in under the guise of reporters. The cry went up to put 'em out and not to put 'em out. Somebody had written a letter to somebody to be read before the Convention, which Mr. MoMullen wanted to have read by the President of the mesting, but which the latter would'nt read. The Press says:

"A runk was made to secure the letter spoken of by Mr. McMullen; after which a regular fight ensued, some of the delegates getting upon the desks, upsetting the inksiands, breaking benches, scattering our notes about the floor, and producing a scene of excitement and disorder, the equal of which we heartly hope may never again come under our notice.
