Here it is:
But the most remarkable demonstration ic action of the House is that against the patriotic action of the State, an abstract of of Senator Bigler, of this State, an abstract of against the patrictic action of the Chase's that of of Senator Bigler, of this State, an abstract of whose remarks appears in our telegraphic report. There is not a decent man in Pennsylvania who will not cry 'shame!' upon such ignorant audacity. This man—who is covered all over with pledges in favor of a fair election in Kansar, who voluntarily committed himself against the Lecompton Constitution because it had not been submitted to the people, and who knows that Kansas cannot be made a slave State, save by fraud of the mest infamous character—now comes forward to say that he had hoped to see Kansas coming into the Union as a slave State! Our proud State has been repeatedly humiliated by the weak and wretched tergiversations of Senator Bigler. His present attitude demands a new_degradation to himself, and a new insult to his constituents. And he has been equal to both. A more studied dieregard of the popular will, and a more arrogant perversion of principal contents and feetic wave was witnessed. We and vacillating. So much for Bigler, a worthy successor to John Pettit, of Indiane: We regret, however, his summary and most expressive D. D. on the that Mr. Benton is not in the Senate to confer "Senator from Pennsylvania" as he did upon the "Senator from Indiana."

A DQLETCL SQUECT.—It is worthy of note that Mr. Toombs, of Georgia, is peculiarly happy in all similes and illustrations involving a reference to posthumous honors. In a recent speech in the Senate he proposed to erect all through the South monuments more lasting than brass to those patriots who should stand by the Lecompton Constitution, as he said had already been done to the memory of those who died from the Nebraska bill. These declarations and promises come in a manner quite natural from Mr. Toombs although they have, we imagine, a very bioleful sound" to those pure patriots who think more of a fat office than of a dozen "Toombs". As, however, the promise has been made, we suppose the South will not stand by the converted by the Court, no capital sentence could be passed upon him, in consequence of his life having been guaranteed to him governed the sentence could be passed upon him, in consequence of his life having been guaranteed to him over of a fat office than of a dozen "Toombs". As, however, the promise based on the made, we suppose the South will not stand the suppose the South will not stand to the converted by the Court, no capital sentence could be passed upon him, in consequence of his life having been guaranteed to him over of a fat office than of a dozen "Toombs" stones." As, however, the promise has been made, we suppose the South will not the suppose the South will not stand the suppose the South will not suppose the South will not suppose the South will not suppose the suppose the South will not suppose the suppose the South will not suppose the suppose sentence could be passed upon him, in consensity of the first promise has been made, we suppose the South will not back out of it, and we would advise all cunning workers in marble, brass, or other material "more enduring than brass" to send in their proposals to Mr. Toombs. Let Mr. Dewart have his measare taken at once, for we judge from all the papers weihare seen from his district and from every voice that is heard from that quarter, that Mr. D. is just as good as dead and buried to day. The others, such as Jehu Glancy Jones, and Gillis, may live a little longer, but their monuments might as well be in preparation. They will soon be needed.

The author has written too ong a preface. If he had so many scruples he ought never to have printed these poems; after confessing to so many and then printing, the preface savors of affectation. Much that lies within the covers of the book needs no apology; all bespeak a power that the author has not used here to any extent. We have marked many passages as extracts and designed to make use of them here, but must forbear until a more convenient season. The following are some of the golden thoughts from H. W. Beecher's sermons:

"Many men want wealth—not a competence alone, but a five-story competence. Everything subserves this; and religion they would like as as a sort of lightning rod to their houses, to ward off, by and by, the bolts of divine wrath. We sleep, but the loom of life never stops; and the pattern that was weaving when the sun went down is weaving when it comes up to-morrow.

the pattern that was wearing when the sun went down is wearing when it comes up to-morrow.

Ho who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will dud the flaw when he may have forgotten its cause.

If a man's odious in society, he might as well be in prison. The worst prisons are not made of stone: they are of throbbing hearts, outraged by an infamudus life.

Some men are like pyramids, which are very broad where they touch the ground, but grow narrower as they reach the sky."
