B. RIDDLE & Co., PITTSBURGH:

MONDAY MORNING, MAY 24, 1858. The Washington Union and the English

It is a true saying, sustained by years of experience, that whenever the North enters into a compact with the South, to accomplish any particular purpose, the North is invariably cheated. This has been the case ever since an antagonism has grown up between the two sections, and Norin are commenced that we would be supported by the courage nor the honesty any previous year: hearly as many volumes any previous year: hearly as many volumes have been sold, and more gratuitously circulato stand up for the rights of their constituences.

It will be remembered that when the English ted.

There have been published forty-five new ted.

who have letter the constituents. It will be remembered that when the English Bill was passed by the votes of the Anti-Lec comptontraitors, these renegates consoled them selves with the assurance, which had been given them by the Lecomptonites, that the Constituents that would be again submitted to the people with the saurance, which had been given them by the Lecomptonites, that the Constituents that would be again submitted to the people with the saurance, which had been given them by the Lecomptonites, that the Constituents that the Constituents of the Mannas. This was the erry will them all—from Constituents. The properties of the Constituents of the Con must be very pleasant for the contemplation of such a "doughface" as Pugh, who was almost kicked out of the white-house, for soliciting a favor from the President, after that personage had no longer any use for him. The Union article is written in reply to an Alabama journal, which was somewhat dissatisfied with the English Bill, as construed for the benefit of North-

which was somewhat dissatisfied with the English Bill, as construed for the beneft of Northern doughfaces—and we quote a portion of it:

"We appeal to the record. We shall let the conference act itself explain precisely what it does submit to the popular vote of Kansas. It provides in terms that the question of cubmission with the following proposition in lieu of the (land) ordinance framed at Lecompton be submitted to a vote of the people of Kansas,—That is the very language of the act. The 'question of admission' and the 'proposition' in regard to lands, are the things submitted to popular vote and nothing else.

"All the supporters of the late Senate bill admit that the Lecompton Constitution is now the lawfal Constitution of Kansas as a prospective State. It was so in December, when Congress met, it is so now, after the passage of the conference act; it will be so up to the day that the vote of the people of Kansas shall be taken on the 'question of admission' and the 'proposition' respecting the lands submitted by Congress; it will be so, if the vote which ever way the majority of the vote may be cast. Of course it will be so, if the vote be in favor of admission." That is the majority of the vote shall be cast against the land ordinance and admission." That is the land ordinance and admission." That is the land ordinance and admission. That is the only question which our argument has left to be disposed of.

"We know of no power in Congress to abroat a State Constitution, whether the State be incipient applying for admission into the Union, or a matured and sovereign State of the Union, or a matured and sovereign State of the Union, or a matured and sovereign State of the Union, or a matured and sovereign State of the Union, or a matured and sovereign State of the Union, or a matured and sovereign State of the Union, or a matured and sovereign State of the Union, or a matured and severeign State of the Union, or a matured and severeign State of the Union, or a matured and severeign State of the Union, or

SALLING UNDER FALSE COLDES.—Under this of an adverse vote in Kansas on the land ordinance, such a clause could not have abrogated that instrument. It is only the people of Kansas on (and they only by regular and legal modes of procedure) abrogate the Lecompton Constitution; and, as the question of abrogate or ratifying that instrument is not submitted to the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and subscience of the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and subscience of the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and subscience of the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and the people of the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and the people of the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its shore facility and the people of the people of abrogating the Lecompton Constitution in case of an adverse vote in Kansas on the land ordinance, such a clause could not have abrogated that instrument. It is only the people of Kansas who can (and they only by regular and legal modes of procedure) abrogate the Lecompton Constitution; and, as the question of abrogating or ratifying that instrument is not submitted to the people of Kansas in the vote that will be taken on the land ordinance, of course its abrogation or ratification is not invoived in that water. The vote may, indeed, under the circumstances, afford an indication of the wishes of the people in that matter; but the vote will by no means be an act either of ratification or of abrogation is to that instrument.

The proper adjustment of the right sort of an instrument for the care of some kir to of physical debility, has for several years been engaging the attention of medical men, with the most satisfactory result. It used to be, that instruments of this kind were rare, and the uncommou increase of such cases show it. A Truss for the relief of herais, so as to keep it in position, merely, was all that was looked for, but now we have every variety of applications for the cure of this disease, and some that in cases in our our immediate neighborhood, have been radically cured. The man who has given the most sedulous attention to this branch of business is DR.
