THE FRANKLIN ALMANAC FOR 1859.

This well-known and popular annual, formerly published by Johnston & Stockton, after a lapse of 7 years, will again shortly be issued. The calculations as formerly will be made by the ablest mathematician, Sanford C. Hill, Esq., who will also prepare for its pages such reading matter as will make it an entertaining and instructive magazine. Besides the reliable astronomical calculations, a new and ingenious table of time, an accurate method of drawing meridian lines, and other matters of permanent value will be added.

Orders of booksellers and other dealers are solicited in advance of publication, as but one edition will be printed, and orders will be filled according to priority.

From the London Punch, June 26.

Mr. Harey Punch.

And Mr. Punch dreamed that he was Mr. Harey.

And behold, Rulers of the Earth had been turned into quadrupeds, by an elevating and improving magic, a hint from

"the Xmas bay
Where Circe dwelt, the daughter of the Day."

And their people brought them to the great Harey-Punch that he might tame them.

Come prancing in, on a handy blank horse, with a red eye, and he tried to trample upon everything in his way. They called him Corsican. A Newspaper was laid before him, and he stamped it to atoms, and only to those who approached him on their knees would he be placable. Mr. Punch talked to him like Tve minutes, and then Corsican ran playfully about holding the Cap of Liberty between his teeth. He kicked a hole in a drum, and snorted with delight as Mr. P. whistled our National Anthem.

Keys embroidered on his cloth, there entered a sleek, but vicious-looking Italian horse, named Tiara. His vice, as was explained by one Mazzini, his keeper, was, that having gained your confidence by apparent good nature, he would strike out, lame you, and try to roll over you. He had actually maimed, in this manner, another horse called Liberty, who had then been killed by a French quack veterinian in ten minutes Tiara was dancing on his hind legs, to the music of Luther's Hymn.

He was a Centaure of Spanish blood, was then introduced. She was named Thy Tancrent. She had fondling and wheedling ways, but suddenly lashed out and bit venemously and never was so dangerous as when apparently in the best humor! She came of a bad stock, but ill training had been the poor thing's worst enemy. Very brief time passed, and she was carscoling round the ring, delighted with a popular air called the Pronunciamento.

Why a Turkish horse named Abdul, was brought to Mr Punch, he could not tell, the animal being in an excellent condition, and incapable of doing much harm. The point seemed to be to give him activity, but the only thing that excited him was the attempt to take away any of his gay trappings. There was talk of entering him for the Enlightenment Stakes, but he evidently could not live in the pace.

Then came Bomba an obstinate brute, exceedingly malicious, whose fort was getting anybody into a corner, keeping him there, and occasionally kicking him in the face or stomach. The stern, yet mild Dompter stood no nonsense from this animal, and in a quarter of an hour he amiably beat time to a hymn of Watt's, and it was clear that he would see no enemy in a Turk.

A rather young horse from Vienna was next subjected to the process. He also was ill-bred rather than positively vicious, and he became frightened at the commonest objects, when nothing allayed him but the sight of soldier's uniforms. He was gradually familiarized, by the Tamer, with the sight of the obnoxious articles, and speedily allowed a Newspaper to be freely flung at him.

Some Russians then came with a horse called Alexander. "I had a good deal of trouble with his father," said Mr. P., "but this seems altogether a horse of another colour." And so it proved, Alexander rather shying at the sound of a gun, but being apparently pleased with that of the railroad. "A free goer," said Mr. Punch, "and I hope to see him at Ascot."

Lastly came a Yankee horse called President Sly Boots. The moment he entered he deliberately winked at Mr. Punch. The latter went gently up to him, and, being a master of the American language, addressed him as follows:—

"I calkilate old hoss, as you ain't in want of no teaching from me, I'll content myself after Cruiser, air you? Never mind about cruisers. That's all square, yes Sir-ree. And you knows it all-fired well, old hoss. Yew git out!" added Mr. Punch, with one of Mrs. Barney William's most brilliant equines.

President Sly Boots set up such an uncommon hearty horse-laugh that Mr. Punch awoke.

THE ROYAL LOVERS AFTER MARRIAGE.—If one may judge from the following account, the married life of Prince Victoria's eldest daughter glides on as smoothly and pleasantly as a boat.

The little lady really loves her lord more devotedly than is often the case in her rank of life, and there are many anecdotes in circulation illustrating the artless manner in which she displays her attachment. The first time the Prince went over to Potsdam "on important business," i. e. drilling and manœuvring his brigade of Guards; but he had scarcely been absent a few hours when he was recalled to Berlin by a telegraphic despatch from the Princess, begging him to return immediately. He hastened back in the utmost alarm, fancying something dreadful had happened, and was quite relieved by her receiving him in her usual health and spirits, only stating, when questioned why she had sent for him in so violent a hurry, that she "had felt such a longing to see him again;" "and besides," she added, on her husband's remonstrating with her for calling him away from his professional duties, "mamma always telegraphs for papa when she wants him."

This reference to what her mamma does, the little Princess considers a justification for any offence she may commit against the starch etiquette of the Prussian court. One day she put on her bonnet and walked across the street to her father-in-law's without even a footman behind her, to the inexpressible horror of her Obuhofmeisterin, or duenna-in-chief, who exclaimed that no Prussian princess had ever been guilty of such a breach of decorum. "But mamma does so on Sundays, returned
