BITISDUTIG GRAVITICATOR CONTRIBUTION CONTRIB and give it countenance, although he would, no doubt, have willingly footed the bill. His descrition of principles to which he had repeated as a base act, even among his demagogue-ridden constituency, who denounce him as a faise-hearted traitor. His own body-guard of office-holders, finding that an association with such a political renegade is contaminating, are flinging his favors back in his face, and joining in the popular enterty against him—an outery which will eventually overwhelm him. Lecompton has been a fatal measure, indeed, to Northern doughfaces, and the lesson should not be lost, when old Berks teaches it to her recreant and faithless representative. Mr. Buchanan has required sacrifices from his friends, which oven a despot would deem swere and exacting.
