and one of our readers may be deceived by his arise, or have any excuse for being misled by him, we are impelled to give him a little further attention.

The first appearance of Mr. Thomas Farley on the theatre of politics in this county was as an Abolition candidate for the legislature.

In 1839, now nearly twenty years ago, the old Abolition party brodght out their first tioket in this county, and at the head of the nominations for Amembly attool the name of Thomas Farley.

He received, on this his first essay in politics, 192 votes, as any one can learn by examining the fathers. The received his first tiokes in the official returns as published in the Gattle for their first tioket in this cointy, and at the head of the nominations for Amembly attool the name of Thomas Farley.

After this exploit wo lose sight of him until 1842 when, with a political facility which is characteristic of him, he turns up as the demonstration of the country, and the shriek of the manics widow, the cries of his pointing the solitions all of the country with the professed deallist? doors of the locofoco mansion are always open, and he was soon as noisy a locofoco as ever. In 1862 he was again pro-slavery, supporting the Mexican war, opposed to the Wilmot Proviso, and in favor of Pierce and of the South getting as many new Slave States as she could. This time he turned up on the strong side. Pierce rewarded his proslavery seal by giving him the Alleghany post office; and during his possession of that place, he was the ardent supporter of Piarce's administration—the meanest we have ever had, (always excepting the present one). He justified the repeal of the Missouri Compromise; sustained the Nebraska bill; defended all the Kansas outrages and fraud; went to Cindinati (on a free pass) to get Buchanan nominated; made speeches through the country in a send as a man with gold spectacles to cry and mocking the fear of bringing her in as a Slave State; and so long as Buchanan kept him in office, advocated Lecompton and all its company and advocated Lecompton and all its company and advocated Lecompton and all its company and more in the termination of the training of the sine, locofocos alone committed to a proper scrating when offered for all the country down to the verige of the authors of the sine, locofocos alone committed. But Bachanan put him out (probably because he knew him); and now he has turned another somersault. He is now anti-Lecompton, or at least he would have folks believe so. "With an overwhelming majority of her people in favor of protection, our State sends men to the Eathroad question. When Gen. Robinson initiated, here, the system of building railroad swith city and county bonds, and it was considered old-fogyish to be opposed to it, no one was so ready to help it along as Thomas Farler. Was not Thomas Williams the attorney of the road? Why, then, should he held back? So he "grant in," to use a western phrase, and helped Gen. Robinson through with his scheme to involve the two cities in a railroad debt of $600,000, and also with the twin scheme to put a load of $1,000,000 on the county for the benefit of the Pennsylvania road. For his kind aid in this regard, his friead Gen. Robinson pensioned two of his sons and a son-in-law upon the road. The popularity of the system of county subsariptions continuing, he salso helped to obtain signatures to the recommendation which urged the contraction of the terrification of the terrification of the terrification in the tariff, by which his constituents, and his position at Washington, before the assembled to the Union, are extremely inconsistent. With the persence of the Congress hoad of $1,000,000 on the county for the benefit of the Pennsylvania road. For his kind aid in the regard, his friead Gen. But there came a day when the evil of these subscriptions returned to plague the inventors, and then Thomas turned tall upon his own work. It was no longer popular, and hence he must be against it. He runs with the crowd. When county railroad subscriptions are popular, he is for them; when they are not, he is against them. Thomas shapes himself, as well as he can, to the public sentiment. This is the scoret of his present position. It is not that he cares about taxes or popular rights, but that he thinks this a fine opportunity to get effice, and he mounts the shit-railroad hobby with the same zest that characterised his riding of the railroad hobby a few years ago. He has been on all sides of all other questions, and why not on this? He has been an Abollitonist and a Pro-slavery man; a free-soller and a Pierce man; a Lecompton and an Anti-Lecompton man: an Anti-Know-Nothing; and the candidate of the Know-Nothing; a Washingtonian, and the frequenter of lager beer salcons; and why should he not, also, be on both sides of the railroad question? He is a facile politician, changing whenever the wind the course of the democracy, and then only condition on which the integrity of the party on be secured in by waiting the way indicated to it by washing to hand the frequenter of lager beer salcons; and why should he not, also, be on both sides of the railroad question? He spoke at Clarion on the 7th inst., and there predicted that Kansas would be admitted into the Union under the first constitution she may form, by an almost unsatimous northern and southern demogratic work ! It was in Clarion that Bigler made gratic work ! It was in Clarion that Bigler made so compared with that of last year:

Dem. the speech which was afterwards published in the Union and Post of this city, in 1856, where in he declared substantially, that the only hope for Free Kansas was in the election of Buchanar. He came home then fresh from a tour in Kansas, where he had been holding the cup of Promised freedom to the lips of its people, which he hastested to his seat in the Senate to dash to the ground. He labored all last term at the Ground. He labored all last term at the Lectompton swindle, and afterwards to drive the Roglish Bill through Congress, which declares the 2000 people are smooth to constitute a English Bill through Congress, which declares that 30,000 people are smough to constitute a Blave State, but no less than 93,000 will do for a Free State; but Congress having adjourned, lowe find this man in Clarion again, declaring these figures a trifle, and may increase the aggresse vote to 114,000.

In the Legislature the Senate will constit of thirty Republicans and one Democrat, or thirty-one Republicans and no Democrat, according to the latest report. The House will contain one hundred and three Republicans and forty-sight Administrationists.

Mr. Burko says he is armed so strong in honesty that all attacks upon him pass by as the idle wind. That's Shaksperian, but in his case it lacks the essential element of being true. We have been rummaging among old records, for his particular benefit, and in the file of the Post for particular benefit, and in the file of the Post for that day to reason a speech of his, delivered to a crowd of locofocos who were just about with all the epithes in his vocabulary. The billingsgate which he heaped, on that occasion, on the head of that illustrious statesman, stirred the indignation of the gallant Clay Whigs of that day to its immost depths, and those of them who survive remember it yet with a lively interest. The Whigs of that day were devotedly attached to Henry Clay, and they have never forgiven, nor will they ever forgive the men who, like Andrew Burke, prostituted their abilities and thair nosition to defame him.
