Terrible Domestic Allesation.—There is a family residing near this city which presents an extraordinary case of domestic allenation.—The husband and wife, though living in the same house, have not spoken to each other for twenty-years. The difficulty grew out of an alleged act of infidality on the part of the husband. A separation was not desired by cither, but a coldness immediately grew up between them, and this long silence has been the result. A favorite daughter has been the medium of communication between them. The husband readily supplies all the wants of the wife, and the wife privately provides the requisite comforts for the husband; they meet daily, but never speak! This allenation has now cristed so long, that the (wenty-years' silence will prohably never be broken. They are in excellent circumstances.—Cim. Times. No. 54 St. Chair Street,
