Are you ready to go? saked the officer.

At any moment.

Then we have nothing further to detain us here.

Alaric put on his cap, and as they passed out through the narrow passage Bellerus found an opportunity to whisper in his ear;

Be cautious—keep a guard upon your tongue —mention not hunthe's name, nor suffer any allusion to her to drop from your tongue.

And yet there was a tramulusness in his tone —a terror in his very breathing—that belied in the words of hope he spoke. Alario recognized those garbs, for he hadseen in his hand.

Alario recognized those garbs, for he hadseen them years before, and he knew that only the decentioners were them! The moment his eye reated upon the grim visitors, he knew that his doom had been spoken, and that the time for execution had come! instinctively he placed his hand upon his hip, but there was no weapon there. He was all unarmed, and seemingly powerless against the giganite ruffiams. The man who held the torch leaned it up against the wall, where a projecting point of rock helped the upon the man the control of the prisoner.

A variety of thoughts occupied Alario's mind as he passed on through the narrow, dimly light-ed streets. He remembered how he had seen his father cut down, and how his brother had been butchered; and the same bloody tyrant who had done it had now sent for him. Pyrrino, king of Sicily, sat upon his throne of gold and precious stones, and about him were a few of the hardened, cruel, subservient men whom he dared to trust. He was a middle sged man; short and clumsy in stature; with a face broad and brutal in its expression, and strong-ly marked by dissipation and debauchery. If he halever persent the assurance of a brave man, he had lost it now, and his only hopes of safety were in the willing swords about him, and in the terror which his cruelty inspired. The light from three huge chandeliers of massive gold cast a strange luster over the large apartment—the beams being here reflected from polished mirrors; there from pillars of mastle and porphyry; and anon taking deeper hues from the gaudy tapestry that hung upon the walls. 'I am to die!' the youth said, with his hands clasped upon his basom.

'We'e all got to dissome time, and those who die frat will get the sooner out of a very wicked world. And since you know what's coming I suppose you'll take it as easily as possible.'

What a lifetime of thought and feeling was crowded into the next moment. The three gleaming swords were raised, and the doomed youth, saw them pointing surely to his heart. There was no hope of escape by flight, for between him and the door advanced the workmen of death! There was no hope in his own strength of body and limb for, unarmed as he was, the power opposed to him was unconquerable. So he leaned back against the recking wall, and shut the horrid monsters from his sight.

We give this as a sample; to the it is only the beginning of this most interesting facinating and absorbing tale—the balance or continuation of it can only be found in the New York Ledger, the great family paper, for which the most popular writers in the country contribute, and which can be found at all the stores throughout the city and country, where papers are sold. Remember and ask for the New York Ledger, of November 13, and in it you will get the continuation of the story from where it leaves off here. If you cannot get a copy at any news office, the 'publisher of the Ledger will mail you a copy on the receipt of five cents. 'Ah—here comes the lieutenant. We shall see.'

There was a movement among the guard at the lower end of the chamber, and presently an officer approached the throne, leading Alaric by the arm.

'Is he unarmed?' the king cried, as his eye rested upon the youth's tall and ainewy frame. 'He is, sire. We found only a simple sword upon him, and that we took from him.'

A contemptuous look overspread the youth's face as he thus found a monarch so fearful; but when he gared full upon the features of the tyrant who had slain his loved kindred, an expression of deadly hate swept over his noble brow, and a keen fire burned in his dark eye. 'Ye gods!' grapsed the king, as he caught a full view of the youth's face, with this deep expression from the soul upon it, 'what have we here?' Come no nearer! guard him well! Who art thou!'

Had the sword of death been at that moment suspended over our here's head, and ready to fall at a breath, he could not have curbed the emotions that swelled in his soul. In all his nature there was not one principle or incentive that could lead him to bow and cringe before one whom he so utterly despited and detested. Had he thought of the future, he might have spoken differently; but he thought only of the present and the past—he thought only of the present and the past—he thought only of the present and the past—he thought only of the problem of the soul to have full sway.

'I am Alaric,' he answered, looking full into 'Pyrrho's face.
