Pittsburgh Gazette.

PUBLISHED DAILY AND WEEKLY BY S. RIDDLE & CO., FIFTH STREET, ABOVE SMITHFIELD.

SPEECH OF J. H. HAMMOND,

Of South Carolina, at Barnwell, S. C., Oct. 24th, 1858.

When four years ago, the Kansas and Nebraska act was passed, giving Governments to those Territories, I was, like most of you, a private citizen. I was earnestly engaged in renovating old lands, and creating new out of morasses hitherto impenetrable, and I had as little desire or expectation of ever again taking a part in public affairs, as the least ambitious of you here present. I made up my mind then that this bill was fraught with delusion and trouble to the South, and so expressed myself on all suitable occasions.

The bill had two leading features in it. It enacted that every Territory, in forming its Constitution for the purpose of applying for admission into the Union, should have the right to establish its own organic or Constitutional laws and coms in with its own institutions, with the single condition that they should be republican. Why, unless our Constitution is a mere waste paper, all our institutions shams, and our theory of self-government a fallacy, this principle and privilege is their essence, lies at the bottom of the whole, and constitutes the corner stone. It is the very right for which our fathers fought and made a revolution. I might not have refused to reaffirm it—but it was supererogatory; it might well weaken the whole structure to dig up, for the purpose of verification, its foundation.

The other feature of the bill was the repeal of the Missouri Compromise line. That was already repealed. It had long fulfilled its mission. It had calmed the troubled waters for a time. It was obsolete until the annexation of Texas, when we acceded to the demand to extend it through the northern deserts of that State. But when California came—California that should have been, and may yet be, a Slave State—and we demanded to extend that line to the Pacific, and thus secure for the South a portion of the magnificent territory purchased in part by her blood and treasure, it was refused. Then that line was blotted out everywhere and forever. To repeat it was a mere formality.—The Supreme Court had recently pronounced it unconstitutional, and so the repeal was, in no respect, of any importance.

But this bill, with these two features, neither of them of any practical importance, magnified and exaggerated by orators and newspapers into great Southern victory, led the South into the delusion that Kansas might be made a Slave State, and induced it to join in a false and useless issue, which has kept the whole country in turmoil for the last four years and gave fresh life and vigor to the Abolition Party.

THE LECOMPTON CONSTITUTION.

Through the most disgusting, as well as tragic scenes of fraud and force, the Territory of Kansas at last came before Congress for admission as a State, with what is known as the Lecompton Constitution, embodying Slavery among its provisions. But at the same time the Convention by an ordinance, demanded of the United States some twenty-three millions of acres of land, instead of the four millions usually allowed to new States containing public lands. It was almost certain that a majority of the people of Kansas were opposed to this Constitution, but would not vote on it: and this additional nineteen millions, which if allowed, would probably have kept them again from the public polls, was what the South was expected to pay for that worthless Slavery clause, which would have been annulled as soon as Kansas was admitted. I confess my opinion was that the South herself should kick that Constitution out of Congress. But the South thought otherwise.

The only principle involved in this whole Kansas affair—if an affair so rotten, from beginning to end, can have a principle at all—was this:—Would Congress admit a Slave State into the Union? The Senate said yes. The House, by adopting the Crittenden substitute, said yes, if we are assured that a majority of the people of the State are in favor of it. For this substitute, all the opposition voted in both Houses, so that a very number of Congress of all parties, first and last, committed themselves to the principle and policy that a State should be admitted into the Union, with or without Slavery, according to the will of its people—thus reenacting the Kansas and Nebraska bill. Whatever there was of principle or honor in the matter was acquired by the votes already given. The English bill, however, came up in due course, and I voted for it cheerfully, believing that it was better calculated than any that had been offered to close up this miserable business, which has furnished much the most disgraceful chapter, so far in our history.

But it is said that in submitting this land ordinance to a vote of the people of Kansas, Congress submitted also the Lecompton Constitution with its Pro-Slavery clause. If so, the passage of the ordinance was surely no pointed outrage. Badly drawn up as the bill is, I should like to see the clause or the words that would justify such an assertion. If there was such a clause, why did not Judge Douglas and his friends vote for it? Why did the Black Republicans and all who voted for the Crittenden substitute, which submitted the Constitution, vote for this bill? It was the very point they made, yet to a man they voted against it. That, I think, should be conclusive.

The people of Kansas have, by an overwhelming majority, rejected the land ordinance as modified by Congress, and refused to come into the Union on such terms. Be it so. It is what I expected—what I rather desired. It sorts precisely with what I felt when I saw Kansas thrust herself into Congress and demand—reeking with blood and fraud—to be enrolled among the States. Let her stay out. I am opposed to her coming in before she has had the requisite population. I do not because she will be a Free State, but because I fully approve of the prohibitory clause of the Conference bill and for that reason voted against the admission of Oregon. Unless in exceptional cases, such as that of Kansas was last winter, I do not think that a State should be admitted with a less population than would entitle her to a member of the House. It is not just to the other States, and is not consonant with the theory of our Government.

THE PEOPLE OF THE SOUTH IN FAVOR OF THE UNION.

But I will not detain you longer with what belongs to the past. The present and the future are what concern us most. You desire to know my position in the country. The South should pursue under existing circumstances. I will give you frankly and fully the results of my observation and reflection on this all important point. The first question is, do the people of the South consider the present union of these States as an evil in itself and do they think it desirable we should get rid of under all circumstances? There are some, I know, who do. But I am satisfied that an overwhelming majority of the South would, if assured that this Government was hereafter conducted on the true principles and construction of the Constitution, decidedly prefer to remain in the Union, rather than incur the unknown costs and hazards of setting up a separate Government. I think I state what is true when I say that, after all the bitterness that has characterized our long warfare, the great body of the South do not wish a dissolution, and will not seek it as a primary object, however promptly they may accept it as an alternative, rather than submit to unconstitutional abridgements of their rights. I confess that, for many years of my life, I believed that our only safety was the dissolution of the Union, and I openly avowed it. I should entertain, and without hesitation express the same sentiments, but that the victories we have achieved and those I think we are about to achieve, have inspired me with the hope, I may say the belief, that we can fully sustain ourselves in the Union and control its action in all great affairs. It may well be asked how I can entertain such views and expectations, when within these few years the South has lost her equality in the Senate, and the Free States have at length a decided majority in both Houses of Congress, while this unfortunate Kansas contest has swept into their political graves so many of our ancient friends in those States, that it may be doubted whether they have at this moment, after the recent elections, the finale of the disastrous Kansas abortion—a majority in any single one of them; and there seems to be no prospect of our extending the area of Slavery in any quarter.
