THE DAILY PITTSBURGH GAZETTE ESTABLISHED IN 1786. PITTSBURGH, MONDAY MORNING, JANUARY 17, 1859. VOLUME LXXII---NUMBER 32 Our "Mountain county" exchanges bring us frequent reports of stampedes among their negro population, and some sime saffect desperate wrath; we recollect when such occurrences were frequent hereabouts, and whenever they happened, there would be considerable fuming, fretting, and some swearing among the victims of misplaced confidence in negro fiest; but, gradually, it would wear off, and they became reconciled to their losses. So it will have to be in the border counties. Although the Panhandle is almost stripped of its slave property, we cannot say that the general wealth is any less than it ever was, or that the people live less contentedly, or get rich any slower than they did when every family, almost, sported its darkey or darkies. The fact is, we have become reconciled to our privation, and are rather disposed is congratulate ourselves, as upon a happy riddance. The Panhandle is, perhaps, as free, now, of African element, either bond or free, as any other section of the Union, without exception. — Weltsburg (Va.) Herald.

The All Herrery R.—Bishop Clark, of Rhode Island, at the close of an excellent lecture on "Public Opinion," remarked that he believed the public sentiment of a civilized and Christian society is furar and purer to-day, the control of the past has not been lost; the gradually turning in favor of truth and right. The labor of the past has not been lost; the labor of to-day is not if wall. No holy work, no righteous act can ever dio. Strike the chords of influence with a maily hand! Their without find the twilight of the morning and not of the evening, and the hour hand on the great dial plate twilight of the morning and not of the evening, and the hour hand on the great dial plate of time never goes back. Slowly and eliently, except when it ariskes at long interval the progressive epochs of the world, it advances toward the moritant.
