EDITORS and PROPRIETORS.
PITTSBURGH:

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JAN. 19, 1859.

FORNEY'S PRESS AND THE TARIFF.—Paragraphs, in substance resembling the following, have appeared in Forney's Press frequently since the commencement of the present session of Congress. Occasionally they appear in the editorial columns, and at other times in the letters from Washington. The one we now quote is from the Washington correspondence of the writer for the Press, who furnishes intelligence from the Capital over the signature of "Pioneer:"

"Some of the Republicans are urging their brethren in the House to push the tariff question over into the next Congress, or so as to compel the President to call an extra session. They are not, however, backed by their party, I think. It is now generally asserted that the Secretary of the Treasury will ask for a new loan! I noticed several of your practical Pennsylvania men here, and hear, with pleasure, that they intend seeing the President to-morrow, to ascertain whether he intends standing fast to his promise in his last message."

We need not remind the reader that the first sentence is a mere repetition of an old charge preferred against the Republicans, by democrats who desire to cover up their own party's perfidy in regard to the tariff. In past times the Whigs were attacked in the same manner, although time subsequently proved the injustice of the aspersion, by showing that without their aid the interests of the country could not have secured protection.

We would remind the Press that the Republicans are in a minority in the present Congress, and are consequently unable to pass any measure without aid from some of the factions of their political opponents. Until we are informed where that aid will come from we think it is unjust to falsely raise a hue and cry, and thus place the sins of the democratic majority on the shoulders of the Republican minority. The last named party succeeded in defeating the administration on certain points in the Kansas controversy, by the aid of that portion of the opposition which the Press represents. Will the same aid be extended in the effort to pass a proper tariff law? We fear not. Judge Douglas and his political friends from the Northwest in the House are openly opposed to the principle of protection, thus leaving the Press solitary and alone in its notions in regard to the Tariff. There is one thing certain, that the only hope for a tariff is in the united Republican party, and if that question fails this session, it is because its friends are too weak in numbers to contend with the various factions of the so-called democratic party. Next session the Republicans will probably be in a majority, and if they fail then, it will be time enough to denounce them.

The political associates of the Press with the exception of those in Pennsylvania, are generally free traders, and it would be well if that journal would leave the "Republican leaders" alone for a season, and try its pursuasive powers nearer home. Judge Douglas would be a fair subject to commence with—for no one in Congress would reflect the greater honor from the fact that he is now an avowed free trader.

DOUGLAS.—The Chicago Times, the home organ of Douglas, indulges in a very bold tone towards the administration. It says:

"Owing his present position, and all the positions he ever held, to the Democratic party, this James Buchanan, assuming the tone of a Louis Napoleon, has sought to dictate to the people of Illinois the men for whom they should vote. He has, through the gang of miserable officeholders who hang at his coat skirts and despise the facile stupidity which allows them to rule him, sought the election of an unanimous Republican delegation to Congress from this State. The people refused to obey the despot, and he has, through his official organ, pronounced them outlaws. He has told them that if they re-elected Douglas they should not be represented at Charleston, and Douglas having been re-elected, it remains to be seen whether the royal edict will be carried out. The man who proclaimed it, the man who instigated it, and those who confirm it by their action, may never hope to hear the approving voice of the American people. They may triumph at Charleston, in the Convention, but God help them before the people."

This article has been freely copied and endorsed by the leading Douglas papers elsewhere; and Forney is even bolder than the Times. He says:

"But the rancor of the administration has not been mollified; it has been more violent and unforgiving. Holding in its hands the offices of the people, and possessing control over the people's money, it has deliberately resolved to seize the Charleston Convention, and in that body to defeat any man who can be elected; because any such man must stand forth the unrelenting advocate of the new scheme of a slave code in the Territories, or of Congressional intervention for the protection of slavery in the Territories. Jefferson Davis has already declared that we must come to this theory. The Washington Union steadily advocates it; and now Mr. Iverson repeats his adherence to it in angry eloquence. So much for one side of the prospect!"

Forney lays it down that the party at the North must repudiate the slavery propagandising policy of Buchanan "and let the administration stifle," and then tells what will be tolerated, and what will not be compromised, and sends the "good word far and wide:"

"Shall this sentiment be recognized, or shall the adherents of the present degraded dynasty be permitted to continue their devastating course—be permitted to run the commission at Charleston, and lay down a platform which will be neither more nor less than a budget of falsehood or deceit? No such movement will ever be tolerated. The day has gone by for any more of these unmeaning platitudes. The Democrats who fought against the administration, and who will continue this war, occupy a high moral position which they will not compromise. They are men, and high-minded men—men who have the courage to proscription, and who laugh at the intrigues of an administration which they elected. Such is the spirit now prevailing here among our gallant friends, and I am glad to send the good word far and wide."

This is decided and strong enough; but in the meantime, the object or supposed cause of all this boldness is showing the white feather at Washington, and going farther than the farthest in support of the Administration. He voted with its chosen supporters against the French Spoliation bill; he also voted against the amendment fixing the central route for the Pacific Railroad; and to crown all, went into the administration Senatorial caucus, and out-Heroded Herod in his devotion to the administration scheme of acquiring Cuba. He submits without a murmur to all the indignities put upon him, and seems more anxious to become reconciled to than to oppose the President. Is this the man to lead the rebellion indicated by the strong utterances we have quoted?

JOHN LETCHER has written a letter accepting the nomination for Governor, conferred on him by the Democratic State Convention of Virginia. In his earlier years, when his judgment was unbiassed by the selfish promptings of political ambition, John stressed a belief that his native State would be all the better if its slaves were emancipated. Although these views were in accordance with those entertained by the founders of Democracy, he was compelled to take them back before he could receive the support of his party. In this letter he shows himself worthy the support of the modern Democracy, by stating "in language distinct and emphatic, that he regards the institution of slavery existing in Virginia, and the other slaveholding States, morally, socially and politically right."

"TOUCH THE GUITAR LIGHTLY."—A member of the Missouri Legislature, rejoicing in the musically suggestive name of "Guitar," has read a bill in that enlightened body, authorizing Gov Stewart—the man who has been twice within the last year severely pommeled in drunken fights—to offer a reward of $8000 for the "conviction of the Kansas bandits, Brown and Montgomery." Mr. Guitar had better play some mournful air to the memory of Brown family, of which almost every member was slaughtered without provocation by the "bandits" from Missouri two years ago.

GAME AT THE WEST.—One firm at Chicago contracted to send 100,000 pounds of quail and prairie chickens to the east this season, and has already exceeded that amount.

[From the Daily Gazette of Thursday.]

TARIFF.

Messrs. Editors:—I was much pleased with your article in Monday's paper on the condition of the Revenue laws, and I join with you most heartily in wishing that all true Republicans will strive to have this done at once. Let the Democratic party be tested on this subject. So that we may know whether they will adopt the principles laid down by the President, or follow in the free trade doctrines of Mr. Cobb. Was there ever such a humiliating spectacle exhibited in the United States before? The President in his message, recommending an increase of tariff and specific duties, and his Secretary of the Treasury, in his official report making an able argument to prove that the President did not understand the subject.

But my object in addressing you this note was to say, that at Harrisburg, and through the central counties of the State, the people are moving on this subject, delegations of able and judicious men, have gone to Washington, to render any aid they can, by counsel, statistics, or otherwise, to our members of Congress and Senators, in favor of protection to our famishing industry. The time is propitious, the administration must have an appropriation bill passed, to keep the wheels of government moving, and under the present administration, with their corrupt and extravagant expenditures, a very large sum will be required. It is to be expected that this bill will soon be found in both branches, that are unwilling to pass the appropriation bill, without providing the means for getting the money in the Treasury.

Why should not Allegheny county take a part in this matter? We are as deeply interested as any other portion of the Union.

One of our Senators, Gen. Cameron, and many of the Pennsylvania delegation in the House of Representatives, will do all in their power to accomplish for us what we so much need—a return to specific duties. Let Allegheny county send a delegation there to give them aid and encouragement. X.

PARIS, Sunday, Dec. 20, 1858.—The grand chess match between Messrs. Morphy and Anderson closed on Tuesday in favor of the American. The score stood—Morphy, 7; Anderson, 2. The utmost courtesy and good feeling reigned during the whole course of the match, and nothing occurred between the contestants to mar the good opinion each had formed of the other before commencing the game. It was played-too, without any of those harassing preliminaries which the English insist on, and which renders a game of chess a sort of prize-ring or race, course. The two gentlemen met and agreed verbally that the winner of the first seven games should be declared the victor, and that they should commence playing every day at 12 o'clock, in presence of a few invited friends. These were all the preliminaries, and the result shows they sufficed amply.

M. Anderson will return immediately to his class of Mathematics at Brewalaw, carrying with him the good opinion and the friendship of all who have had the pleasure of meeting him here. Mr. Morphy may now sit down and shed tears with leisure, for he has no more worlds to conquer. It has been a source of chagrin to him that he has not been able to obtain a match with Staunton, so as to put a stop to his boastings and prevarications, but the world will agree that the failure does not lie with Morphy, and that therefore he is to be considered as Staunton's superior so long as the latter refuses a match. Mr. Morphy now offers to play Mr. Staunton and give him a pawn and a move, but of course no player of Mr. Staunton's supposed calibre would accept such an offer. Mr. Morphy, however, is justified, after the course of Mr. S., in making such an offer, and says to his friends that he is sure he can beat him with that advantage.

COMMERCIAL DISASTERS IN 1858.—The New York Herald gives, as reported by a Mercantile Agency, statistics of the failure in the United States and British Provinces from the 25th of December, 1857 to the 26th December, 1858.—The number of failures in the States and Provinces, in 1857, is set down as 6118; in 1858, 4538. Of the failures in '58, 4225 occurred in the States. The amount of the liabilities of those who failed in '58, in the States and Provinces is computed to be $100,187,671, of which $95,749,662 was in the States. In the failures of '57, the amount of liabilities was nearly three times as great. The Herald gives the following curious table, which will interest many:

| STATES IN WHICH FAILURES INCREASED IN 1858. | | STATES IN WHICH FAILURES DECREASED IN 1858. | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Michigan | 15 | New York & State | 720 |

DOUGLAS AND THE DUELLO.—Senator Slidell knows that Senator Douglas will not fight—he cannot afford to fight—there are too many interests depending on his life—the Free man's Journal insists, in the name of Catholic Church, that he shall not engage in a duel. Yet Slidell is pettifoggising to get up an affair of honor with Douglas as pertinaciously as if he were a manouvering a bill through the Senate.

Slidell, however, no more wants to fight than Douglas. He has had an opportunity or two of a single combat with Broderick—but he did not like Broderick's looks, and scrambled out of the quarrel as soon as possible. He wants to fight only with those who are not inclined to fight with him. He is like the Frenchman, hearing that a person with whom he had deposited a large sum of money was in doubtful circumstances, called upon him for the money, which he wanted very much. "Well, then, there is a check for the amount." "Ah, you got no money; you can pay? Zen I no want him." If Douglas were to show symptoms of eagerness to get a shot at Slidell, the quarrel would be ended at once.—New York Post.

SCOTCH WORDS.—The Scotch language is perhaps destined to perish. There are many Scotch words and Scotch expressions which ought to be saved from the wreck. By their adoption the English language would be immensely enriched. The Scotch language has no Roman majesty but it lends itself most opulently to pathos and humor. It has been kept free from those pedantic Johnsonianisms which have been so fatal to the English language. In its homeliness there is a power after the touch of Salem on the reed, lacking in Tuscan. The Ft. Wayne and Chicago Railroad through said farm, and commands a fine view of the buildings. Said farm contains 150 acres of highly cultivated and productive land. The buildings large and substantial—the dwelling house is brick, four rooms and kitchen on the first floor, and five on the second, with cellar paved with brick under the entire building. A large frame barn, with sheds, carriage houses, &c. Also, Mills House, Wash House, and all necessary buildings to make it profitable to a farmer and pleasant to the retired business man. Possession given on said farm on the first day of April next. Also, Pears, Plums and Cherries—There is a good Coal Bank, with abundance of coal, convenient for the use of said farm. A great portion of the purchase money can remain on the farm if the purchaser desires it. Any information will be given by W. W. Martin, on the premises, or the subscriber, at Cannon's Mills.
