BOXER'S LEDGER.—We see more and more astonished at each new revalution of Bonnar's apparent reckleseness, in advertising and engaging lies likerry talent. In addition to a half column of matter which was sent to all the leading newspapers in the country last week, the Tribuse of the 24th, had two pages full of "Bonner," for which privilege that individual must have paid the Tribune enough to keep up some papers for a whole year. The Tribune of the 27th, indulges in the luxury of two columns of the same. After the immense array of literary talent employed in writing for the Ledger, and the enormous sums expended in this and in advertising, shall any one say that advertising don't pay! It would seem that, if anything could afford to rest on its own merits, and avoid advertising, it would be the New York Ledger. But its enterprising proprieter is too sound a business man for any such notion. The more encouragement he receives from an appreciative public, the dulges in the luxury of two columns of the same.
