"Woo!, go down and rouse up Jehu, and tell him to put the black for the night. And tell him to put the black draught horses to the close carriage, and light both the front lanterns—for we shall have a dark tormy road.—Shut the door you infernal!

-I beg your pardon, parson, but that villat aways leaves the door ajar after him."
The good parson bowed gravely; and the major completed his toilet by the time the servant returned and reported the carriage ready.
"To the Devil's Punch Bowl," was the order given by Old Hurricane as he followed the minister into the carriage. "And now, sir," he conditioned, addressing his companion, "I think you had better repeat that part of the church litany that prays to be delivered from 'battle, murder, and sudden death;' for if we should be so lucky as to escape Black Donald and his gang, we shall have at least an equal chance of being upsel in the darkness of these drasdful mountains."

Harricane Hall is a large old family mansion, built of dark, red enactione, in one of the lone liest and wildest of the mountain regions of Virginia.

The calais is surrounded on three sides by a range of steep, gray rocks, spiked with clumps of dark evergreens, and called from its horse-shoe form, the Devil's Hoof.

When storms and floods were high, the loud roaring of the wind through the wild mountain gorges, and the terrific reging of the torrent over its recky course, gave to this swarge locality its ill-omessed names of Devil's Hoof, Devil's Run and Hurricane Hall.

Major Ira Warfield, the fonely proprietor of the Hall, was a veteran officir, who, in disgust at what he supposed to be ill-requitted services, had retired from public life to spend the evening of his vigorous lage on this his patrimonial estate. Here he lived in acclusing, with his old-fashioned housekeeper, Mrs. Condiment, and his old family servanings were usually spent in the chase, in which he excelled, and his aftersoons and svenlight were occupied in small convivial suppers among his chosen companions of the chase of the older time. His features were large and harsh; his complexion dark red, as that of one bronzed by long exposure and finshed Dougtse of the older time. His features were large and harsh; his complexion dark red, as that of one bronzed by long exposure and finshed brows, that, when gathered into a frown, reminded one of a thunder cloud, as the fiashing orbs beneath them did of lightning. His hard, harsh face was surrounded by a thick growth of iron-gray hair and beard that met beneath his chin. His usual habit was a black cloth cost, crimson vest, black-leather breeches, long black yarn stockings, fastened at the knees, and morocco slippers with allere buttons.
