Cincinnati at the rate of 30 cents per 100 lbs, from Cincinnati to Philadelphia and flour at 65 cents per bbl.

The gentleman to whom this letter was addressed assures us that the Pennsylvania road is at the same time charging 30 cents per 100 lbs. on wheat, from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia, and 70 cents per bbl. on flour.

Pittsburgh is 350 miles from Philadelphia and Cincinnati, in round numbers, 700; and yet, saithough we are half way between the two points, the Pennsylvania Road is charging our merchants the same price from here, as it charges Gincinnati shippers, on wheat, and is absolutely charging a higher price on flour from here than there. That is, it carries wheat as cheaply, a distance of 700 miles, as it does for only half the distance, and flour at leas!

Will any Philadelphia—will any fair-minded man anywhere say that this is not the vary essence of injustice and oppression?

How long will Pittsburgh merchants submit to this outrageous discrimination against them?
