GAS FROM ROSIN OIL
OR OTHER
FATTY FLUID MATERIAL.
THE HIGH ILLUMINATING PROPERTIES of Gas from Rosin, Tallow, Lard and other substances have always made them a favorite material for the manufacture of Illuminating Gas. Many Gas Companies use it with success, in order to supply their customers with a Superior Quality of Gas.
ROSIN OIL is entirely free from all dross and refuse substances, and yields at once its Brilliant Illuminating Gas.
The greater original cost of the apparatus for the manufacture of coal gas together with the attention and expense constantly required, and the difficulty, if not impossibility, of entirely separating the unwholesome, deleterious and offensive gases, generated in coal, render the ROSIN OIL APPARATUS cheaper and more desirable in every way.
S. COATES, of 376 Broadway, New York, has devoted his attention to the manufacture and sale of Portable Gas Apparatus, and respectfully calls the attention of the public to his present complete and improved machine.
Perfect satisfaction to the purchaser guaranteed in every case. For further information address

(Correspondence of the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.)
LONDON, April 6th.—The last three days have been of rather a stirring character. Contrary to expectation a dissolution of Parliament has been resolved upon, and while our domestic politics are thus thrown into confusion symptomes are crowding upon us from abroad tending to throw new distrust upon the prospects of peace

Notwithstanding the adverse majority of 39 against the Reform bill, there was a general belief up to yesterday evening that the government would neither resign nor dissolve parliament, but would continue to hold office on the plea of the anxious position of foreign affairs and of the incapacity of their opponents to unite for the purpose of forming a solid Administration.—Last night, however, Lord Derby in the one house, and Mr. D'Israeli in the other announced that an appeal to the contrary had been determined upon.

Of course this can have no other effect as far as the personal interests of the present Ministers are concerned than to give them two or three months further tenure. The arrangements for the general election must occupy a few weeks, and the assembling of the new House, and the concoction of the plan of proceedings to be then adopted by the parties on each side, will involve some further delay. We shall therefore most likely arrive at mid-Summer before the ultimate trial of strength will be witnessed. No one doubts that when that time comes the present ministry will be compelled to retire.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the period this turn of events will suit most persons, and best subserve the interests of the country. The results of the foreign policy of the government will then have been fully developed; and in case they are not satisfactory, Lord Malmesbury will not be able to plead that all was going on well until he was deprived of power. The general belief is that with Louis Napoleon on one side, and his lordship on the other, an exhibition must ultimately take place in which the reputation of England for sagacity and dignity will not experience exaltation. If this apprehension be correct, all the preliminary steps of the mischief have doubtless already been committed, and Lord Palmerston, thoroughly aware of that fact, is not likely to aspire to office merely to be made the scapegoat of irretrievable, but at present undeveloped blunders. Lord John Russell, who has no similar credit for assertiveness as regards continental diplomacy, would probably be less cautious, and it is therefore consoling that he will have no opportunity of being tempted by any call to exercise his administrative skill until the general affairs of Europe are in a less ambiguous position.

The advices from France are every day becoming worse. The advent of April so long dreaded has been marked by a sudden increase of military preparation at all points, and the Bourse presents signs of unmitigated uneasiness. Through out Germany the common impression seems to be that the present is the time into his own hands." Such conduct is a palpable insult to all concerned—England, Prussia, Austria and Russia—and so plainly does this appear as to excite the disagreeable surmise that Russia must be a party to the duplicity in progress, and that as far as England is concerned Lord Malmesbury is being deluded.

Consols at the last date were quoted 95¾.—They have since touched 95¾, and have closed this evening at 95¾ with an appearance of great heaviness. The French Bourse continues to decline and at Vienna also there is increasing anxiety.

In the discount market money is in request at the Bank of England minimum of 2½ per cent and although the supply will be temporarily increased next week by the payment of the dividends, there is strong reason to expect that any future movement in the rate will be in an upward direction."

Of course this can have no other effect as far as the personal interests of the present Ministers are concerned than to give them two or three months further tenure. The arrangements for the general election must occupy a few weeks, and the assembling of the new House, and the concoction of the plan of proceedings to be then adopted by the parties on each side, will involve some further delay. We shall therefore most likely arrive at mid-Summer before the ultimate trial of strength will be witnessed. No one doubts that when that time comes the present ministry will be compelled to retire.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the period this turn of events will suit most persons, and best subserve the interests of the country. The results of the foreign policy of the government will then have been fully developed; and in case they are not satisfactory, Lord Malmesbury will not be able to plead that all was going on well until he was deprived of power. The drain of silver to India continues on an enormous scale and the last fortnightly steamer took nearly $5,000,000.

The India loan of $55,000,000 is expected to be brought forward next week.

The Russia loan of $55,000,000 is also looked for at about the same time.

By the Arabia.—LONDON, April 8th.—We are now in the fourth month of the political uncertainties, aroused at the commencement of the year, and there is still a total absence of anything to mitigate them. It is believed, however, that before April is out, the world will be fully enlightened.

The accounts from Paris and Vienna are daily more and more threatening. Throughout France the preparations are such as to warrant an expectation that at any moment a telegram might tell us of war having commenced. In Austria, indignation at the duplicity which is assumed to be the characteristics of the Emperor Napoleon is raising the German blood to fever heat. The Pope and the King of Naples seem to be equally convinced that treachery is at hand, and King Victor Emanuel and Count Cavour are evidently seeking to represent themselves as the rulers of the storm.

If there is no movement it is apparently because all parties are prepared to move. Each is simply waiting for the one who will take the responsibility of the first blow. Meanwhile there is a fearful undercurrent of assassinations in Lombardy and elsewhere. In the midst of this, the talk of a Congress seems merely child's play, and all over the continent the feeling has spread, not only that it will end in nothing but that it is not likely even to meet.

Still the diplomatists keep up their hopes to that effect, and some persons pretend to state the day when the assembly will take place.

The boldest date named is the 20th of the present month. Others think that nothing can be arranged before the 30th. The public at large consider the matter just as uncertain as at the moment the proposition was first accepted. The locality is still in doubt. Aix la Chapelle, Baden-Baden, Manheim are all said in turn to have been rejected, and the latest rumors have pointed to Frankfort. The demonstrations in every part of Germany, however, have been such that the French Emperor would be likely to regard that spot with extreme dissatisfaction.

According to the latest accounts, Austria insists that Piedmont shall discontinue her armaments as a condition precedent to the Congress, failing which the Vienna government will refuse to treat. The other powers might [illegible] and discuss [illegible] anything. The claim of Sardinia to be admitted as a party to the Congress is understood to be decisively
