SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 21, 1859.

The Great Prize Fight.—Heenan, the champion pugilist, and Sayers, the champion of England, fought a prize fight on Monday morning last, near Farnborough, in England, which lasted two hours and twenty minutes, when the fight was declared a drawn battle by the referee, in consequence of the approach of the police. Heenan returned to Detroit on Monday evening last, and was received with great enthusiasm by the people of that city. Sayers returned to London on Tuesday.

Mr. Johnson is an old California gold digger, and was therefore prepared to judge correctly of the specimen of gold in question. A considerable quantity, and long enough in the market to test its value fully, has been offered at the enormous rate of five cents! During the first excitement, when the "color" was first found, it would have found a ready sale at $1 per ounce, and probably at more than that. But it has not been so easy to gather the metal in large quantities upon the public highway, and the gold seekers are rapidly leaving the mines for the more profitable labor of digging gold in any of the old and well established localities. Many have returned to their homes, and others, after finding that the gold was not to be had in the streets, have gone to work in the mines. Mr. Johnson is of the opinion that there will be no more than five or six hundred persons in the mines during the summer, and with scarce enough food to feed the hundreds who were going there in the first rush, there were not more than five or six hundred who were going to starve. Many who were going to the mines, as they would from the plains, to dig down upon the promised land, by the upturning of a stone, returned to their homes, or the nearest settlement, to get employment at any thing that would yield them bread. Others, who had been induced to go to the mines by the flaming accounts of the newspapers, were compelled to work for their board, and many of them left the mines as poor as they went there. The Pike's Peak excitement was a humbug, and those who went there must be, at least, one hundred and fifty miles from the mines. Dramatic Mirror.
