The position here taken by the Fillmore administration is undonbtedly the correct one—do correct that, as will be seen, the French government, awed by the determined stand of our national law. This very fact, that such an admission was thus obtained from the French government, increases the wickedness of this administration in abandoning a concession of so much value to the adopted citizens of this country. The case, proves, also, that a firm stand taken by our government against the claim of a foreign war. The French government yielded when we registed this claim in 1852, and it would yield now, as it did then, if we had an administration as jealous of the rights of its editions as it seems to be reckless in abandoning them.

In this event, a harful source of irritation and unfriendly feeling will be avoided."

The position here taken by the Fillmore administration is undoubtedly the correct one—e0 irritation and undoubtedly the correct one—e0.

The Kiddent Parkers.—It will be recoileded that in our last we gave an account. Since that in our last we gave an account of a daring abduction of pegroes in this county. Since that the two two the periodical services bear made by our nerves and efficient Speriff, Robert McCarney, who in that line of business crinces a sagacity which would be a credit to the far-fined Bow-street runners of London. In going over to the arms of his new love, the gentleman gives went to his convictions thus:

"In the Presidential contest, where the field will be occupied by the Republican and Democratio forces marshaled in battle array, no Southern men, Southern men and heritates as to his place.
