The following is the fext of a circular just addressed by Count Caront to all the Ministers and representatives of Sardinia sbroad;

"Tusts, Juno 12.—Sir. In a previous circular dispatch I had the honor of making known to the legations of his Majesty the cats of spolitistion of which the Austrian army was guilly in the Sardinian provinces that it occupied. I ought now it in the Sardinian provinces that it occupied. I ought now it inform you that a judicial investigation has been ordered by the Government into this matter. It will prove that Austria has brought in the Sardinian provinces that it occupied. I ought now it inform you that a judicial investigation has been ordered by the Government into this matter. It will prove that Austria has brought in the Sardinian provinces that it occupied. I was of war, and that the conduct of her troops is not that which distinguished civilized nations. The results of this inquiry will be communicated at the proper time to the legations. But there is now a fact just the press it would perhaps not be believed; the Government ought itself to make it known, and guaraintee hig exact truth.

"On the 20th of May, the very day of the battle of Montbello, about 11 in the foremon, some Austrian troops encamped on the highs of Torricella, as small commune in the provinces of Voghera. A patrol baving met on the road the bailif of the cribunal, and having compelled him to dat as a guide, entered the willage and went into the house of a farmer named Cignoli. There, after a strict earch in every part of the bailting, the soldiers ordered all the members of the Cignoli family and every other individual happening, to be in the farm-yard to follow them.

The search had enabled them to discover in the house a small leathern bottle containing a very small quantity of ehot for a fowling piece.

The machine cuts off the wheat heads about eir inches below the ear, and they fall into a large canvas hammock, which, as soon as filled, is emited on a platform of boards at the end of the field. When the field is cut, a threshing machine is set to work, and the wheat is ready for market. The straw is allowed to stand till near seed time, when it is set fire to and burnt off, leaving the land perfectly clean, every noxious seed is destroyed. The land is then resown when the stand that and harrowed in; and this system continues year after year. Marble Tops for Furniture, Wash Stands, de, de, de DOMESTIC AND STAPLE DRY GOODS ockport.
