A New Poem by Whittier.

From the advance sheets of the Atlantic Monthly for August we take the following poem by the Quaker poet of New England:

BY PSALM.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

I mourn no more my vanished years:
Beneath a tender rain,
An April glory in its tears,
My heart is young again.

The west winds blow, and, singing low,
I hear the glad streams run:
The windows of my soul I throw
Wide open to the sun.

No longer forward and behind
I look in hope and fear;
But, grateful, take the good I find,
The best of now and here.

I plough no more a desert land,
To harvest weed and tare;
The manna dropping from God's hand
Rebukes my fainful care.

I break my pilgrim staff, I lay
Aside the toiling oar;
The angel sought so far away
I welcome at my door.

The sire of Spring may never play
Among the ripening Horn,
Nor freshness of the flowers of May
Blow through the Autumn morn;

Yet shall the blossomed gentian look
Through the fringed lids to heaven,
And the pale aster in the brook
Shall see its image given.

The woods shall wear their robes of praise,
The south wind softly sigh,
And sweet, calm days in golden haze
Melt down the amber sky.

N. t less shall manly deed and word
Rebuke an age of wrong.
The graven flowers that wreath the sword
Make not the blade less strong.

But smiting hands shall learn to heal,
To build as well as destroy,
Nor less my heart for others feel
That I the more enjoy.

All as God wills, who wisely heeds
To give or withhold,
And knoweth more of all my needs
Than all my prayers have told!

Enough that blessings undeserved
Have marked my erring track—
That wherever my feet have wavered,
His chastening turned me back;

That more and more a Providence
Of love is understood,
Making the springs of time and sense
Sweet with eternal good—

That death seems but a covered way
Which opens into light,
Wherein no blinded child can stray
Beyond the Father's sight;

That care and trial seem at last,
Through Memory's sunset air,
Like mountain ranges overpast,
In purple distance fair—

That all the jarring notes of life
Seem blending in a psalm,
And all the angles of its strife
Slow rounding into calm

And so the shadows fall apart,
And so the west wind play;
And all the windows of my heart
I open to the day.

The Paris gossip of the Liverpool Journal contains the following story, which, unlike most of the tales of Paris, is fit to be told:

"A certain young Irish beauty, engaged to a desirable young Englishman, went to the French capital on a visit to her aunt about five months ago: with her went her lover and her sister, and a gay season was enjoyed by all parties. As for the bride elect, she found a certain Polish prince, who frequented her aunt's salon, so agreeable that she actually told her affianced bridegroom; and, what was astonishing, the bridegroom quite agreed, and thought so too. Some weeks passed on thus, the Polish prince became more and more delightful, the bridegroom more and more willing to own it, until one fine day the heroine informed her English lover that she did not think their marriage a desirable thing. The lover with wonderful alacrity, agreed with her, and this engagement being broken off, he at once offered himself to the sister of his former fiancee, who readily accepted him. Everything was now going on smoothly, only the Polish prince did not propose promptly as he was expected to do: however, the young Irish girl was strong in hope that, at the approaching marriage of her sister to her lover, the laggard man would say the necessary word. The wedding soon took place, and the fair girl, as bridesmaid, leaned on the arm of the prince, who officiated as groomsman. Coming out of the church, the Polish prince sighed heavily, and turning his eyes upon the bridegroom, exclaimed, as he pressed the bridesmaid's hand, locked at that moment within his own, 'Poor fellow, how I pity him!' 'Why so?' said the lovely bridesmaid, half offended. 'Why, for marrying. How can a man be such an ass!' I, for one, would never marry, if Venus herself, with 50,000 ducats in each pocket, were offered me.' A heavy mass fell upon his arm—the bridesmaid had fainted, and he carried her back to the sacristy, wondering what on earth he had taken possession of her at the last moment, and grinning horribly at the idea of this tardy remembrance of the obligations to that conventional sensibility which bridesmaids are compelled to exhibit."

THE WHEAT HARVEST OF BERKS.—Our farmer friends have doubtless ere this finished harvesting their wheat crop and stored it away in their capacious barns. Some of them, we hear, have already commenced threshing and preparing their grain for an early market. More and better wheat, we venture to say, was never harvested in this county. The fly, the rust or the mildew, have not touched it, and it has been safely housed, too, without the slightest damage from bad weather or exposure.

According to the last census, Berks county raised in 1850, 677,668 bushels of wheat, (which we think much below the real amount,) and 1,-320,209 bushels of rye. At that time rye appeared to be the main crop—but our farmers have since turned their attention almost exclusively to wheat. From the breadth sown last year, and the extraordinary yield of this great staple, the crop of the present year, in this county, will hardly fall short of two millions of bushels. Less than one fourth this quantity is consumed in this county annually, so that, if our estimate be correct, there will be over a million and a half of bushels to send out of this county, to feed the hungry in less favored districts. We heartily congratulate our agricultural friends as well upon the conclusion of their arduous labors, as upon the rich returns with which they have been blessed by a kind Providence.—Reading Jour.

OUR LANGUAGE.—The greatest wealth of our language would seem to consist in its abusive words—a fact of which Shakespeare has taken advantage. "We of the Saxon brood are perhaps as abusive in our language and terrible in our oaths as any nation on the face of the earth." Not the least interesting consideration is the change of definition which words are constantly undergoing. Sycophant meant in Athens, where the name took its origin, one who informed of the contraband exportation of figs; witch, a wise person, as did also magician; comrade, a chamber companion; sarcasm, a flesh tearer; chivalry, riding on horseback; saunter, to go to the Holy Land; salary, salt money; robe, the skin robbed from an animal and used for a garment; sign manual, the impress made upon parchment by an inked hand, which was a method of legalizing the instrument, etc.

A MAN AND WIFE CRUSHED TO DEATH.—During the storm on Wednesday night a frame house, new and unfinished, located two miles and a half below Hurfville, near Philadelphia, occupied by Mr. Thomas Woodrow and wife, and a lad in their employ, was blown down, crushing to death Mr. and Mrs. W. When the gust came suddenly upon them the house indicated its unsubstantiality in a very perceptible manner and the three inmates ran towards the door. The boy succeeding in getting out, when a violent wind closed the doors upon the others, and the housed was levelled to the ground, engulphing Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow in its ruins. Aid was procured to disinter them from the wrecked mass, but when found their spirits had fled to their eternal home.

PLATFORM OF THE DEMOCRACY IN MISSISSIPPI.—The Democracy of Mississippi, in Convention assembled the other day, adopted a platform "without a dissenting voice." It reannounces the Cincinnati Platform as "the basis of party action." This, we presume, will be eminently satisfactory to the North. To be sure, the Cincinnati Platform is still the national creed. But in these platforms—the Democracy of the fire and brimstone State of Mississippi, expressly qualify their endorsement of the Cincinnati Platform, by stating that they "hold that the doctrine of 'non-intervention' with the institution of slavery in States, Territories, or the District of Columbia, does not, nor was it intended to conflict with the assertion of the power of Congress to protect the property of the citizens of the several States, who may choose to settle in the Territories, which are the common property of all the States."
