The Two Villages.

Over the river on the hill,
Lish a village white and still;
All around it the forest trees
Shiver and whisper in the breeze;
Over it sailing shadows go
Of soaring hawk and screaming crow,
And mountain grasses, low and sweet,
Grow in the middle of every street.

Over the river, under the hill,
Another village lieth still.
There I see in the cloudy night
Twinkling stars of household light,
Hear in the mirk and dismal day
Shutters flapping to and fro,
Watch the worm through rotting doors,
And the translucent spiders sail
From the lintel to the nail.

In that village on the hill,
Never is sound of mill by mill;
The houses are thatched with grass and flowers,
Never a brook to drive the mill,
The marble doors are always shut,
You cannot enter in hall or hut;
All the village is mute,
Never a grain to sow or reap,
Never in dreams to moan or sigh,
Silent, and still, and low lie the;

In that village on the hill,
When the night is starry and still,
Many a weary soul in prayer
Looks to the other village there,
And weeping and sighing, longs to go
Up to that home from this below;
Longs to see once more by his child,
Whither have vanished wife and child,
And hearth, praying, this answer fail,
"Patience! that village shall hold you all!"

THE BRITISH GOLD IS COMING.—The prints which are friendly to a protective tariff, often warn us of the evils likely to spring out of our exports of precious metals. We have many times shown, on scientific principles that their apprehensions were groundless; but we mean to show now that they are groundless for another reason. That high authority, the official organ of the federal government, assures us in the most positive manner, that the "British" mean to send back all the gold they have had from us, and perhaps more.

This result has been brought about by the instrumentality of Senator Seward, who was lately in London. He went abroad, ostensibly, for his health and in order to observe the various objects of interest in foreign countries, but in reality, it seems, to enter into a fearful combination for the overthrow of the government of the United States. Mr. Buchanan's organ, the Constitution, fastens the treachery upon him beyond all peradventure, and by the most overwhelming proofs. They are these: When Mr. Seward arrived in London the Daily News of that city remarked upon his arrival, spoke of his high position as an American Statesman, and moreover said that he was a candidate for nomination to the Presidency, with good chances of success. Now, says the Constitution, "mark that! the London Daily News is the organ of the Exeter Hall Abolitionists, and the faithful chronicler of the proceedings of anti-slavery the parties in the provincial towns of England, and Mr. Wm. H. Seward is fortunate in having the aforesaid British Abolitionists as their candidate for the next Presidency of the United States !"

The Constitution proceeds;

"No American who has a single spark of patriotism can read the article without feelings of indignation at its arrogant interference in American affairs, and the manifest concord that it manifests as existing between the Abolitionists of this country and those of Great Britain to bring about a severance of the Union, for the profit of British capitalists. Mr. Seward has certainly sold himself to this infamous combination. Until now we were at a loss to explain Mr. Seward's sudden visit to England. It is now apparent, that we may confidently expect the free use of British gold in the next presidential election, for the purpose of compassing the villainous purpose which he and the British abolitionists have in view."

How dreadful it is to think that Mr. Seward and the naughty British abolitionists will not let the precious Union alone; but then, again, how delightful to think we are to get plenty of British gold for it! When the Nullifiers and those Southern Democrats with which the Constitution sympathizes, threaten us with eruption, they do not propose to pay for the ugly process. The British are more generous, and gild the pill they poison. They are so compassionate as not to rob without an equivalent. While they knock us on the head with their clubs, they fill our pockets with their guineas. There is compensation in this, and if we are to be extinguished, it is pleasing to feel that we shall die rich.

We hardly think, however, the Constitution was prudent in disclosing the scheme in the way it has. With the known avidity of its partisans for all sorts of plunder, we are afraid that when it is once shown that the Republicans will have the distribution of the British gold, there will be no keeping them together. Like the congregation of Scotch wreckers, which rushed out of church when a cry was raised, that a richly freighted vessel had been stranded, they will desert to a man, and President Buchanan, like the minister on the same occasion, will have to say, "Gentlemen, let us all start fair." It is to be hoped that the gold will not be so abundant as to produce a result so much to be deprecated on all sides.

Besides the Constitution ought not to frighten Wall street in this sudden and shameless manner. What are we to do with all the gold when it comes? Chevalier and Cobden have told us already that the enormous yield of the mines is about to plunge us into a gold bath, that it is going to produce a most uncomfortable plethora; that the prices of everything will be so high that it will take a ladder to reach them, and that inflation, disorder and distress must be the consequences wherever commerce is known. Now, was it not enough to be threatened with drowning, suffocation, and a general cataclism, all through gold, without having the British offers remorselessly opened upon us? Mr. Buchanan's organ is indiscreet. It should have broken news of this awful calamity in prospect by degrees, and not overwhelmed us at once.—N. Y. Post.

BURNING AT THE STAKE.—Our telegraphic dispatches have again conveyed to the reader information that a human being had been burnt to death at the stake. Where did this occur? In New England? Did any one ever hear of their doing such things in the land of steady habits? Perhaps it may have been in the Middle States, then? What? Would the land of William Penn, or Calvert, or Carteret, or the descendants of the Knickerbockers, be guilty of acts of that description? Ah! no. Wherever else it may have been, it was not here. Was it in the free northwest, with its heterogeneous masses of settlers from everywhere under the sun, and all-wild and rough on the frontiers, however calm and peaceful it may be in the settled districts? Tell us not of such a supposition. The free west has many sins to answer for, but not this—oh! not this. It never burnt a human being at the stake. Where, then, was this awful deed perpetrated, if not anywhere within the regions named, which contain two-thirds of the population, wealth and intelligence of the whole Republic?

It was in that section of the Union where alone horrors like this are possible—it was in a region, where the people of the north are always accused of fanaticism, abolitionism, and every other freak of fanaticism, possible to minds at sea on any one subject; where the press and the politicians are forever gibbering about the constitution and the laws, and obedience to lawful authority, and trying to convey the impression that while they are the special friends of law and order, we are anarchists, rebels, outlaws, and the like. It was in—where else could it have been—in the slave-holding section of the confederacy.

Were this an isolated case we should hesitate to refer to it in these terms, for the south is full of noble and generous people, and has high qualities which command our respect and esteem, and we should make due allowance for the occurrence. But it has become so common at the south as to take its position among the permanent customs and recognized habits of the southern people, and unless they can free themselves of it, they must take the consequence. Within the last ten years very many cases like this have been chronicled in the newspapers of the south, to which alone we are indebted for the information in every case. The accounts are usually made up, too, by editors so lost to all sense of right and propriety as to defend or apologize for the infamous deed, and hold it up to the negroes of the neighborhood as a warning. Why so? does the reader ask. The reason is plain. It is a warning that it will be repeated on other offenders.

The avowed object is to appal the negroes, and deter them from the commission of similar crimes; but like all severe punishments, this utterly fails of its object, as is clear from the frequent happening of these mob executions. They do not prevent the recurrence of the crime so punished; and hence, knowing this, those who go on repeating the punishment in defiance of law, do so merely to glut their revenge and gratify base passions. And what crime is it that causes men at the south to get so completely beside themselves? Sometimes it is murder; sometimes rebellion; sometimes rape. There are laws for the punishment of all these crimes, and there need be no fear of the negro escaping, if public sentiment is so unanimously against him. His death being inevitable, the law is sufficient for that. But it seems
