STEAM PLOWING.—A SUCCESSFUL TRIAL.—The Philadelphia Ledger publishes the following report, which a person who was present says fails to say all that the complete success of the experiment would have warranted. The trial is to be repeated again this week, on Tuesday, (to day,) Wednesday, and Thursday; and the Board of Agriculture of the American Institute, at their meeting yesterday, appointed Ed. A. Lawrence, John Jay, C. M. Saxton, and Mr. Leonard, as a Committee to attend the trial, and, if possible, get the owner to make an exhibition of the plow at work, during the Fair and Agricultural Show which is to be held in this city Sept. 14-16 — Steam plowing is one of the most important matters connected with modern agriculture, and a successful exhibition of a working machine would be looked upon with very great interest.

The following is the Committee's Report:

The undersigned, a Committee on behalf of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society, at the invitation of Mr. Fawkes, the inventor of the Steam Plow, visited Oxford Park, near Philadelphia, this afternoon, Thursday, July 21, and witnessed the operation of the plow. The soil was in good condition, owing to the late rain, which rendered the experiment more satisfactory. Before proceeding to plow, about 300 gallons of water were pumped into the tank by a donkey engine attached to the machine, and in a very short time sufficient steam was raised to prepare it, so as to display to great advantage the ease and grace with which it could be moved forward, turned round, backed, &c

The engine, which is of 36 horse power, is adapted to either wood or coal, and when the latter is used consumes about half a ton a day.

The anxiety and interest of the Committee and a number of visitors now became manifest. Sympathy with the inventor, who had devoted years of toil and his entire means to the perfecting of his machine as well as a consciousness of the many failures of projected agricultural improvements, and of the unhappy results to the originators, sensibly affected the minds of the Committee.

All doubts, however, of its success were speedily removed. The plows, eight in number, which were suspended by chains in a frame attached to the rear of the machine, about eighteen inches above the ground, by means of a slight adjustment of a crank, were dropped to their proper position for action; and at the sound of the whistle the plow moved forward in the most graceful manner, performing its work with easy, and to the admiration and perfect satisfaction of the most skeptical.

The soil, which was made to yield to the unified action of the eight moldboards each turning a furrow slice of fourteen inches in width and six inches in depth, moving at the rate of four miles an hour, (or four acres an hour,) presented the appearance, in viewing it from the rear, of the undulations of a wave, sliding the plows entirely from view The effect was most pleasing, and elicited the admiration of all.

The experiment was made upon a tough timothy sod, which had not been plowed for some seven years previously

The grade was of about seven degrees, which tested the powers of the machine to perform on inclined surfaces One of the Committee, familiar with prairie plowing, affirms that he has never seen level prairie turned as beautifully by horse power as the uneven timothy sod was by the steam plow

Mr Fawkes, still further to show the capacity of his machine for easy locomotion over uneven surfaces, propelled it rapidly over several gullies, one of which was fully eighteen inches in depth, while others were very abrupt, and this without any apparent detriment to the machinery, and also turned it in a circle several times, of a diameter of about twenty five feet, and passed, by request, across the ground just plowed, without any difficulty showing conclusively its adaptedness for all agricultural purposes, not only as a field plow but as a means of propulsion for mowing and reaping machines

Your Committee are further of opinion that the engine is applicable to the driving of threshing machines, farm mills, circular saws, &c.

It may be proper to add that Mr. Fawkes placed the machine entirely at the disposal of the Committee, and subjected it to every test which they suggested.

SINGULAR COMBAT BETWEEN TWO FROGS.—A few weeks since some masons were at work repairing Hollis' Oil Factory at Somerville, when they became the witness of a singular combat of about an hour's duration, between two monster bull frogs, inhabitants of two pools in the rear of the building They came forth from their respective puddles about eleven o'clock in the forenoon, and approached each other cautiously, each eyeing the other, until they were about a foot apart, when they jumped at each other and commenced the fight. They struck, bit and clinched furiously, and when a fall decided a round both would draw off and puff for a moment, when they would renew the combat.

After about an hour spent in uninterrupted fighting, with the exception of two or three brief respites, each crawled off to his pool and disappeared. Neither was "exactly dead," but both were "kinder gin cout." Neither could claim the victory, as one was terribly lamed in the shoulder by a brilliant "left hander," from his antagonist, while the other could claim the honor of drawing the "first blood," he having drawn the "claret" from his opponent's "mug" on the first or second round. The fight itself was singular enough, but the fact that it was witnessed, but not interfered with, by some thirty or forty frog spectators, of all kinds and sizes, adds to the novelty of the incident.

Our informant, Mr. Edward Grace, officer of the U. S. Courts, says that at the beginning of the fight the frogs assembled about the fighting ground from the surrounding pools, attracted doubtless by the noise made by the combatants, and that they continued peaceable spectators of the "mill," occasionally interrupting it by excited croaking, but at no time approaching the parties engaged in it nearer than within two or three feet. When the contest was ended they nearly simultaneously departed. The whole arrangement seems to have been modelled after modern pugilistic encounters between animals genus homo, with the exception, perhaps, of the absence of ring-master, seconds and bottle holders. We can only speculate as to the cause of the quarrel, but can readily imagine that one called the other "toady," and that frog No. 2, not accepting the term as one of endearment retorted by applying the epithet "hopper" to frog No. 1. Of course reconciliation was then out of the question.—Boston Journal.

THE frozen well at Brandon, Vt., has attracted crowds of savans to that place this season. Scientific persons in that vicinity ascribe the phenomena to an iceberg, and that originally, or at some remote period in the long past, that part of America was the head of the sea. This hypothesis is sustained by the fact that several years ago, in building a railroad between Claremont and White River junction, the terminus of the Sullivan Railroad, the bones of an Arctic Whale were found on one of the highest points of land. All the land near the well is frozen at a depth of a few feet below the surface. An interesting scientific report on the subject is understood to be forthcoming.

A YOUNG French soldier writes to his mother from Castiglione: "Dear mother, I am yet living and lively; but I am not quite complete. The surgeon of the regiment has cut off one of my legs. I have been used to having the leg by me, and the parting was cruel. Do not weep, dear mother, but rejoice, rather, for I will rejoin you now, not to leave you again. I will always be, now, part of your little card party, thanks to the wooden leg."
