A curious case cocurred last week at Rome, in Franklin county, Ohio. Mrs. Peters wife of a German of that name, after a short illness, was supposed to have died. Her husband made immediate arrangements for her funeral, having procured a coffin in this city. On placing her body in the coffin, a general perspiration was observed throughout the skin, which was reported to the husband, with the suggestion that the burial be deferred, in the hope of re-animation. To this the husband objected, and had her interred the same day. (Saturday).

After the burial services were over, some raladires of the supposed deceased, who resided in After the burial services were over, some ralatives of the supposed deceased, who resided in this city, arrived at Rome to attend the funeral; which had already taken place, and hearing of the circumstances, caused the body, which had then been four hours in the grave, to be disintorred, when, to their carriise and joy, they found signs of life still remaining. Restoratives having administered, Mrs. Peters gradually reered, was taken by her friends to this city,

The hoosier, as he rose puffing and blowing above water, caught hold of the tail of the colt, not having a doubt that the natural instinct of the animal would carry him safely ashore. The old mare took a "bee line" for the above, but the frightened colt swam lustily down the content, with its owner still hanging fast. "Let go the colt, and hang on the old mare," should some of his friends. "Phree, booh!" exclaimed the hoosier, spouting the water from his mouth, and shaking his head like a Newfoundland dog, "it's mighty fine you'r telling me to let go the colt; but to a man that can't swim, this sin't exactly the time for swapping horses.
