The Irish Revival.

As there is probably nothing in the present state of the religious world of such interest as the revival in Ireland, we need make no apology to our readers for occupying further space with incidents illustrative of the extent and power of the work. It is pronounced "one of the most remarkable outpourings of the Holy Spirit which has ever been witnessed." Not only ministers and laymen from Scotland, but a deputation of Independent ministers from London, have expressed their strongest convictions of genuineness of the movement. While, perhaps, the Presbyterian churches have shared most largely in its benefits, the Episcopal, Wesleyan and Independent churches have heartily co-operated.

As a specimen of the work among the Episcopalians, we give the following from the Belfast News Letter:

"At the services in the different Episcopal churches in Belfast on Sunday last the congregations were large. In St. Paul's Episcopal Church, at the morning service, about nine of the congregation were brought under a similar influence to that felt in other congregations, and throughout this province at the present time. They were struck down as penitents seeking for mercy, and prayer was continued with and for them during the afternoon, and many others remained with them. At the morning service in Christ Church, Episcopal, four of the congregation had to be carried out of the church under deep conviction. In the other Episcopal churches no revival spirit seemed to beat work amongst the people, and its influence to be felt. The ministers of the Established church, as well as those of other churches, are engaged almost day and night in visiting penitents from house to house; and some of them must by this time, be themselves completely exhausted through labor and exertion."

From the mass of revival reports in our foreign papers we make the following selections as illustrating the peculiar character of the revival. A Scotch ruling elder, visiting Ireland, thus writes to the Edinburgh Witness:

"Every day and hour I am more and more impressed with the importance and reality of the present religious awakening or revival. It is true that manifestly the work of the Spirit of God. Yesterday evening I went some eight miles from this city, to where the movement has made considerable progress. It too, was in a purely agricultural district, no village or hamlet being within some miles, yet, in the very height of the hay harvest I found at 7 o'clock P. M., three hundred and fifty people assembled. One of the ministers addressed them. He said, "I have been a Sabbath School teacher for several years, four years a communicant, yet,' said he, 'until within the last ten days, I thought myself religious while a stranger to Christ. I may say that I never prayed until within the last fortnight.' And in the homely accents of the district, but with touching simplicity, he warned and besought them to flee from the wrath to come. I addressed the convert class, in which there were three Roman Catholics, and sisters or near relations to others; and afterwards spoke to the congregation. One person was prostrated while I was speaking. Afterwards I met with several enquirers.

While speaking to them the door opened, and a face, radiant with peace, and happiness, and joy, was seen. A woman about twenty-eight years of age came forward to the minister and said, 'I could not go away till I told you I have found peace. No tongue can tell how happy I have been since Wednesday. I could not have thought of it.' 'And how did you find peace?' said the minister. 'O,' said she, 'I was in great trouble of mind, and could get no relief. I went into the garden and I saw two worms, and I thought God made them, and how little we thought of crushing or cutting them; and then that he made us, he might well know and that he had not crushed me, and then the thought of his love to Jesus in sparing me came into my heart, and I could not speak for joy; I just wept and wept: O, young friends, (she added,) hold on, you will find peace; and O if it be like mine, you won't be able to tell it.' The accent of this woman was different from the others; and I said, 'what part of Scotland are you from?' 'Ayrshire.' 'What part of it?' 'Kilmarnock.' She could speak, however, only of Christ's love and her joy. O that Kilmarnock had such a revival as has blessed her! I was surprised at first when told that the converts immediately recognized each other. Well I don't wonder at it; I think I could myself pick them out of a congregation, and not mistake one in ten. There is an expression of joy and peace that is quite peculiar—'the bright shining after the rain.' In this district several Roman Catholics have come to Jesus. The employer of one of them, an intelligent and pious physician told me, 'my servant's whole conduct and appearance are altered; her work is better done by far; she reads the Bible, and there is such an expression of happiness in her face as I never saw there before, or indeed on any one, save those who after prostration have found peace.'

"The work progresses here steadily. I will close this letter with two cases. The first is that of a man nominally connected with the Presbyterian Church. He never attended, save an odd time at sacramental seasons. He then paid the minister that compliment, which was all he got in lieu of stipend. His family seldom, some of them for a space of seven years, had not darkened a church door. They came to the meetings; first one, then another was converted. He attended himself, and saw his two remaining unconverted children struck down. 'What!' said he, are all my family to be taken, and me left?' In the bitterness of his soul he cried for mercy. He left the place—came back; still the cry was, 'Shall I be left?' The Lord had mercy on him also. A whole godless family is now changed, and their faces turned Zionward.

"A pious Scotchman, superintendant of a large Sabbath school in the city, had, like many others, great doubts about the movement, hearing of it only at a distance. Soon after it began here, he said in the Sabbath school, I will be happy if any one will say a few words to the school. His little girl—a modest little orphan girl—under slight fever of spirit, rose up and said:—'Dear friends—Last Sunday I went home with a very sick heart. I thought it would break. I was very unhappy, for I was very sinful. I told my brother; he said he would pray for me, but that did me no good. He told me then to pray myself to Christ. I did pray to him to take away my sins; he did it for me at once, and I have been very happy ever since. And, dear friends, I just thought I would tell you all that Jesus will take away your burdens and make you happy too.' During the time these words were uttered, the stillness of death reigned in the school, and superintendent, teachers and scholars were all in tears. There was something irresistable in the solemn yet childish tone and eloquent simplicity of the appeal of the little girl. And the superintendent said, 'In our midst that word is fulfilled to-day: Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise.'"

Another account says:

"On Friday morning, about three o'clock, a procession, mostly composed of young men and women, to the number of about fifty, proceeded through some of the streets of Belfast, singing hymns and psalms. On Tuesday, at noon, there was held a meeting of children in Berry street Church, Belfast. There were about three hundred present, and a considerable number of visitors. Children of not more than twelve years of age, of both sexes, publicly engaged in prayer. The Rev. Pasteur Roussell, a distinguished French Protestant minister, was present. These meetings are to be continued on two days of the week. At the same church, on Thursday evening, a letter was read from an infidel of thirty years' standing, describing the terrible ordeal through which the Spirit of God had lately put him in finding a lodgment in his heart. The meeting was but a short time over when messengers arrived, requesting attendance on two young men who had been overtaken at it. They were mechanics, who had come out of mere curiosity, but were pierced by a word of admonition addressed to scoffers. A singular incident occurred in the case of a young woman who had engaged to another to attend the meeting on Wednesday evening. She violated the engagement, and went to the Queen's Island, where she spent several hours. But she was moved to return by the church and enter, and she had not been many minutes inside its walls until the Lord laid his hand upon her. She bitterly bewailed her indifference to the things of God, and the mockery with which she assailed the subjects of grace. On Friday the church was crowded. Converts joined in the services. A convert, who confessed to a life of infidelity and ungodliness for thirty years, recanted the errors of the past, and professed his faith in Christ—the fruit of the present movement—addressed the meeting with propriety, eloquence and power, and expressed his resolve to preach Christ. He is evidently a man of high intellectual culture and extensive attainments. The narrative of his past life made a deep impression on the audience. The manifested convictions were numerous, and embraced, as is now almost invariably the case, some Roman Catholics among the trophies of Divine grace. The mode of treating convicted souls has now assumed a systematic form. The general congregation retires after the benediction. The prolonged meeting is to attend to the convicted, to counsel inquiring souls, and to supplicate the Heavenly Throne on behalf of special objects. The visitors remain, and the personal friends of those under conviction."
