MONDAY - MORNING, AUG. 29, 1859. Caving .- The following letter from a planter CAURG.—The following letter from a pranter of West Baton Bongs to the Adoccate, describes a singular and remarkable caving of the banks of the Mississippi River in that Parish. The caviller siys:

"About three hundred yards below the point two was the Blanc's, the caving began about ta, sun up, and when I strived there, at 8 o'clock, it is a sun to both half an arting death and [4]. sun up, and when I strived there, at 8 o'clock, it had gone in about half an acre in depth and was ormebling in repliedy. The noise made by the crumbling of the carth was so continuous that it remembled distant thunder. When I returned at sundown it had taken in the house of the widow Godean at least an arpent from the bank, she having but barely time to escape, baving saved only half her furniture. It had also taken in a large oak tree theind the house, at least 75 n a large oak tree behind the house, at least 75 feet in height, which had disappeared entirely, and the caving extended back to an old gin some distance in the rear. Upon measuring with a line the next morning, the depth at the mouth was found to be 80 feet; over where the house stood it was 75 feet, and 50 feet as near the parish, and has been standing nearly a half century, and no daving has been known to have taken place at this paint, of any importance with-in the memory of the oldest inhabitants." A vistroz to the hospitals at Milan says:
"I am told that four Austrians to one French or Piedmontess die from sheer-moral reasons;
besides that their wounds are influitely more dangerous and painful. An Austrian bullet goes right through a fellow, said one of the doctors to me, and either kills him or does little damage; but the French ball is like a thimble, hollow, and in the interior is a three-cornered piece of lead which rebounds and causes hideous contu-sions. The wounds, too, inflicted by the rifled cannon are hideeus to behold. Poor wreiches! Italians, Hungarians, men of every nation, torn from their homes to fight for a cause that is not say:
"A house full of sons is like Lebanon with its cigars, but daughters by the fireside are like the scresof Sharon." The cedars of Lebanon and the roses of Sharon have their action for may-Arong the line of the La Crosse Road, a few ALOSS the ine of the La Crosse Hoad, a few miles above Horicon, says the Milwaukie News, is a signboard, on which is painted in large letters, so plain that "he who runs may read:"
"As both of us are so poor, don't run over my cattle.

shood it was 75 feet, and 60 feet as near the bank where it had caved as it was safe to approach By the known lines of the propictors in front, it is about 180 to 200 feet wide, and 250 steps dr 700 feet in depth.

When examining the cave to ascertain its probable causes, we found that two springs were issuing from the point where it had caved, one issuing from the point where it had caved not feet the discharging quicksand, until, by the abrasion of the current, the body of it had been reached and discharging quicksand, until, by the abrasion of the current, the body of it had been reached and discharging into the river, thus producing the crumbling of the bank. Another conjectire was that it might be the ancient bed of a stream which had in former years flowed out from the Miestsippi at this point.
