The Duching and France.—The "young first of the Golober election which they certainly do not entertain. They have found the game of brag a very successful appliance in their present distress. From every section of the State the same accounts which represent the party in support of the Buchanan administrating as distracted in its councils and literally broken in its organizations, give us the cheering assurance that the forces of the opposition were never more united and enthusiastic in their political attachments than they are at this time.

We are in receipt of private letters from friends in the eastern section of the State, and they all give glowing accounts of the progress of correct principles in that interesting region. While the so-called Democracy sro quarreling among themselves the Opposition are working as one man in behalf of the State ticket, which they are determined to elect by a majority of thoursands. "The only danger," writes one friends in behalf of the State ticket, which they can we help being confident when our opponents are so helpless and our ranks so strong?"
