Rome—1859.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Oh with haste, down with Rome, shout your vivas like mad!
Heap the Pope in his holiday right-presently clad,
From shrine-crown to tee-nail kiss-worthy to the spirit,
Of sainthood in purple to the pattern and pick,
Who the blood of the priest and the soldier incites,
And praying like Aaron, like Joshua fights!

What a fine upsoak of the fife and this batter of drums!
Let the Swiss of the Church from Perugia come—
Mercenary mobile, whose motives drive home
To the hearts of the malcontents, cursed and abhorred,
The gilt Father's nuncios, and "Pious saith the Lord!"
And bind to his help the pelt of the sword!

Oh, maple of Kirmus, gazing forlorn
Black Forest, Thrasymene, dishevelled and torn,
Oh, fathers who plank at your gray boards for shame,
Oh, mothers stretch dumb by a wife without name!
Well ye know how the Holy Church blesses and saves,
And stejender compassion of prisons and graves!

Stand aside, men of Rome! Here's a hangman faced Satan
(A blessing for him surely can't go amiss)—
Would kneel to God's vicar his slipper to kiss.
Fit escort such father—he's blest beyond doubt;
But there's blood on his hands which will never wash out
Though Peter himself hold the baptismal spout!

Make way for the next. Here's another sweet nun!
Hush! that's the unsniff'awful rascal in spadeless dun—
Hush! stoop your ear down! let me whisper the word
He spitted a heretic babe on his sword!
And its mother?—don't name her—three bonnets of red
The Church, Satan helping, must pardon him for!

Hurl here the last sinners, in scandinals hot,
With the hearts of a wolf and the stealth of a cat—
(Jesus and Herod together were rolled)—
Who keeps all as one the Pope's conscience and gold,
Mounts guard on the altar, and pillars from thence,
And flatters St. Peter while stealing his purse!

Who despite Art and model! Have miracles ceased?
Who, with stale-brew'd saws, dare Barabas protest!
When the Church eats and drinks, at its carnival board,
Due Bruno-flesh and blood carved and sliced by the sword—
Must its tenants cry, unmoved, clasp the cross on his breast,
And toast, as his prayer, his neighbor hested!

There! the bells jow and jangle the same blessed way
That they did when they rang for Bartholomew's day—
Hark! the fallow trees murmurs, nor autumn, nor leaf,
Yet the air with a sickly, selfish horror of odor
The unsacrandies clutter all round, without stint,
The incense-pot swings with a taint of blood in't!

Pile! heap! fire-red Cardinals! who dare complain
Of caste or Church-rights? Spare not one's virgin
Whose dutiful ears heeded with honors, and digits
For heads that would damn any heretic's soul!
And robbers, turned priests, who have nothing to fear,
But daily hell heretics, by making it here!

Good Designs Rewarded.—Cook's Tooth-Ache Drops, 1849.—The affliction of Job answered a three fold purpose, viz: to prove Satan a liar by his own mouth, and, that he was powerless against the servants of God; to humble Job, and be a direct, and efficient means of greater sanctification; and, to vindicate the assertions, and glorify the name of God before ungodly men, and devils.

But his friends made a gross mistake in their pre judgment of his character. Elipbaz had seen a vision, which, the very naturally thought, must have been made for the purpose of showing him how to deal with Job; but by his indiscretion, honest impulses he made a display of affection to the already prostrate sufferer, who had calmly put away temptation, when prosecuted by Satan, either by; sickness, or through his dispairing wife. Had Elipbaz been less hasty in jumping at his conclusions on the connection of sin with natural evils, and legislegerome of his vision—not serving a part for himself, to teach him that he was not 'more just than God,' oh, how much anxiety and distress would have been saved!

Striking displays of the providence of God are not generally the direct and legitimate consequence of concealed wickeness, or the exponent of the wrath of Jehovah against the sufferer. This appears plainly, not only in the case of Job, but in several instances in the history of the Saviour's life. (see John ix 2, Luke xiii., &c.) And the comments of Jesus upon those circumstances are enough for proof. But if the wise friends of Job were liable to fall into so great a mistake, how much more are people liable to the same at the present time. And it is not the worst demonstration of this feeling when it arises at the sudden displays of alarming Providence, but when, by careless parents, teachers, and the like, it is instilled into the tender mind and fixed there, to be a deformity in the matured character. Let no parent or teacher act without forethought when, after disobedience of some minor command, an accident is construed into a judgment. Let the parent visit his fearden and see how fast fruitlessome weeds increase without any cultivation. Let the teacher take his pencil and calculate the power of progression, and then judge by these of the power of superstitious feelings upon the mind. Inasmuch as we find ourselves so very liable to mistakes, and see that our judgment is fallible, it naturally follows that we should never condemn, and should be careful how we censure our fellow mortals. No wonder that our Saviour said: "Judge not, that ye be not judged." No wonder that he should condemn everything of this kind, as he saw its whole bearing.

Still, there must be some judgment of character in every station of life, but let the words of Christ: "By their fruits shall ye know them," be the standard.

And the evil of this prejudice falls not alone upon the person condemned, for the one who indulges in such forbidden evils thereby fixes his eyes on the very thing he is not, when he happens to meet reverses, conscience, or self-training, lays the blame upon himself with double energy, and induces despair rather than hope. Moreover, it should be remembered by professors of religion that Christian sympathy is contagious, not condemnation, and while Christians of all orders must not neglect to warn the afflicted sinner, and make use of the judgments of God to lead sinners to repentance, they should by all means strive to do this in a Christian spirit, such as is spoken of in Psalms cxli., 5. These considerations present great inducements to Christian faithfulness, for in all the necessary labor we are not alone

"Our captain looks on
Heheehous from the skies,
He reaches out a starry crown
And bids us take the prize

Be faithful unto death!
Partake my victory!
And thou shalt wear a starry wreath,
And thou shalt reign with me"

In spite of the intrigues of Satan, and the mistakes of men, God will, in due time, vindicate his own cause; therefore let the afflicted soul patiently wait for deliverance, seeking for more grace, and more holiness.—Vermont Chronicle

THE GULF STREAM AS A FERTILIZING AGENT.—We read in Once a Week: If we follow the Gulf Stream across the ocean, we perceive how fully it fulfills the purpose for which it was designed. Sir Walter Scott tells us that the pools in the Orkneys are never frozen, the effects of the grand hot-water warming apparatus of a far distant shore being plainly felt even in these islands, which are situated in latitude nearly ten degrees further north than the ice-bound coast of Labrador. We all know that in Great Britain there is an extraordinary difference between the eastern and western coasts—so great indeed as to induce completely different systems of agriculture. The emerald isle owes her splendid grazing land to the soft west breezes born of the Gulf Stream which strikes full upon her shores; the western shores of England are robed in bright green pastures nourished with the warmth and moisture issuing from the south tropical source. The dairy produce of Great Britain has its root and issue
