BROADBACK.—The deceased Senator from California is to be honored with a grand procession in New York, his former residence, the home of his early manhood. New York is justly proud of Broderick, and seems resolved that his memory shall not be unhonored. A military company called the Broderick Guards, and the fire companies of New York, Hoboken, Williamsburg and Staten Island, will compose the cortege. The funeral honors will be celebrated on Sunday next, the procession passing through the main streets of New York, to the Cooper Institute, where an oration will be delivered. The catafalque will drawn by eight horses, led by grooms, and move in the middle of the procession. All the companies will appear in citizens dress, and no machines will accompany the line.
Broderick was left an orphan by the death of his father in his youth; the hotel which he kept was not of the order of city taverns, but a country village inn. Nor was he the bruiser or rowdy he has been represented. Having no advantage of education, he bought books, fitted up a library in the upper part of his hotel, and spent a large portion of his time in study. In fact, all the relevations made since his death go to show that his character was totally misapprehended—that he was pure in morals and upright in his general course. Before leaving New York, he had amassed considerable money by serious fortunate real estate speculations, and also shipped goods on mercantile ventures. The espirat thus prepared still fitted him to get a handsome start in San Francisco in refining and assaying gold.
While New York is preparing to honor him with a funeral procession, the people of California are moving earnestly to build him a suitable monument. Meetings have been held in the principal cities, and committees appointed to collect funds. A board of directors had been appointed to manage the affair; and our California papers tells us that there can be no doubt of a very handsome monument being erected. It is proper, at least it would be so, but in addition the full and impartial record of his life should be written and published in book form, to rescue his fame from the foul aspersions cast upon it all through his career, and show how the man of strong mind and native force of character may elevate himself from any position in society to rank, wealth and honor.—*N. THE MURDER OF YOUNG BROWN.—The following is the account of the killing of E. P. Brown of Ossawatomie and Harper's Ferry fame. The Herald, after speaking of the destruction of the old man's property, by the Missouri Border Ruffians, says:
John Brown had a son, E. P. Brown, who, near Easton that winter, (1855-6,) was taken prisoner by the Missouri ruffians, and confined in a store. Then it was an express visited Fort Leavenworth, and begged that United States troops might go to the spot, and save Brown from being murdered. That was refused—and refused, too, in compliance with positive orders from Washington. What followed? Captain E. P. Brown was helpless as a babe in the power of the pro-slavery men; a band of ruffians struck him, and he was left for dead and hoted to be permitted to fight the beasts in another way, he would fight for his life—but the cowards dared not give him that chance. Brown then dared any two or three of them to fight him, but the cowards would not comply with that request.
Then the fiends in human shape rushed upon the unarmed, defenceless Brown, and actually hacked him to peices with their hatchets. A slaveholder named Gibson dealt the fatal blow, burying a hatchet in the side of Brown's head, splitting his skull for inches, and scattering his brains. Brown fell and his enemies jumped upon him; while dying, he cried out, "don't kill me, I am dying," and one of the Pro-Slavery wretches—since then rewarded with a commission as U. S. Marshall—stooped over the prostrate man, and spit tobacco juice in his eyes.
Thus died Capt. E. P. Brown—a Free State martyr—the son of John Brown, known as Ossawatomie Brown
From that time forward the old man devoted himself to warfare upon slavery. He became the leading free state partisan in the Kansian troubles, and was the terror of the Missouri frontier."
Whoever may incline to merciless judgment of the father, let us ask what might not be the maddness of the father this goaded to hatred and revenge'

NEW JERSEY JUDGES.—There is a simplicity about the following which is quite refreshing, and carries one back to antediluvian times:
A distinguished member of the New York bar was retained on one occasion by a friend, also a New Yorker, to attend to a complaint made against him before a New Jersey justice, for an alleged assault and battery upon one of the residents of the "Old Jersey State."
"I appear for the prisoner," said the counsellor to the modern Dogberry.
"You abbers for de brisoner, do you; and who den be you" interrupted the justice, eyeing him from head to foot with marked curiosity "I don't know you; vair be's you come from and vot's your name?"
The counsellor modestly gave his name, and said, "I am a member of the New York bar."
"Vell den," replied the justice, "you gan't bractis in dis here court."
"I am a counsellor of the Supreme Court of the State of New York," reiterated the attorney.
"Dat makes not'ing tifferent, said the investerate justice.
"Well then," said the baffled lawyer, "suppose I have to your honor that I am counsellor of the Supreme Court of the United States?"
"It isn't make a pit petter, replied he of the ermine, "you ain't a counsellor vun do State of New Jersey, and you gan't bractis in dis gort."
The decision accounts for the fact that New Jersey is not in the United States.

PRIMITIVE SIMPLICITY, OR THE RECKONED BY ONIONS.—Carry modern civilization back three score years, and it would cut a sorry figure without modern art. The progress of an age depends not so much upon natural growths as artificial appliances. Sixty years ago there were no daily papers. Telegraphs, railways, and steamboats were then unknown. Friction matches had not even enlightened the world. The sun dial and hour glass alone took their notes of time. Darkness it would seem must have brooded over the earth
At such a time as this, says a now aged friend, I was teaching school in a Massachusetts village. One Monday forenoon I had lost my reckoning, and time were heavily away. I longed to dismiss school but feared to excite the surprise of the parents by sending the children home too early. In this dilemma an idea struck me. I would send the dullest boy I had, with an empty dinner basket, to the house of a spinster near by, whose hour glass had a more methodical reputation than mine, with idstructions to bring back the time of day in the empty basket. Accordingly, the boy was despatched on his timely errand. It was not long before he returned, bearing eleven and a half onion as the result of his expedition. I was satisfied, set my hour glass in motion, and in a half an hour dismissed the school.

CAPTAIN COOK A DEMOCRAT.—While those having Captain Cook in charge, after his arrest, were waiting at Hagerstown, Maryland, for a carriage to take them to Charlestown, as we learn from the Baltimore Clipper. Messrs. George Eranar and Wm. Motier, two Locofoco candidates on the county ticket, approached him and engaged in conversation in reference to any political question involved in the insurrection at Harper's Ferry. The Captain declared that politics had nothing to do with the matter. The gentlemen interrogated him further as to his own politics, when to their great surprise, the Captain told them that he had not voted for many years, but that in politics he was a Democrat. No further inquiries about politics were made by those candidates.

SUBMARINE TREASURES.—Our readers have doubtless read the narrative describing the destruction of Port Royal, Jamaica, by an earthquake, in 1692. At the time of the calamity, Port Royal was the head
