PITTSBURGH:

THURSDAY MORNING, JAN. 19, 1860.

THE CONTEST AT WASHINGTON.—Various propositions have been made by sagacious persons at the national metropolis to overcome the obstinate and foolish course of the democratic minority in the House of Representatives. Under the lead of the disunionists of the South the efforts of the democrats have been directed to prevent an organization, without regard to the effect it may have on the country, and they have thus far, through the aid of traitors, been enabled to defeat the Republican candidate for the Speakership. The correspondent of the North American writes, under date of the 16th:

"Since other efforts to organize the House have failed, it is quite likely that the Opposition side will insist upon a continuous session, for the purpose of endeavoring to bring the contest to a close. While members are only required to sit a few hours, and to consult their ease, the struggle may be prolonged until their personal necessities, or the wants of the government, compel its termination. When forced to remain in their seats until the House is brought to a practical and direct sense of its responsibility, they may take a different view of the question, and discover some mode of exit from this deadlock. The experiment is worth trying, result how it may. It will at least satisfy the country of an earnest disposition on the part of our friends to exert every means, and to invoke every parliamentary expedient for the purpose of electing a Speaker. The opposing elements have the power, if they choose to combine, to carry adjournments, and thus to defeat these praiseworthy efforts. But they will be constrained to go upon the record as opposing attempts to organize, and must expect to confront that responsibility before the country."

The above plan seems feasible, and should be tested at an early day. Deprive these vaporing brawlers for secession of their regular lunch, with its accompanying brandy and water, and their propensity for mischief will at once undergo modification. Let their powers of endurance by all means be put to the test, and good results may possibly flow from the experiment.

The Washington correspondent of the Tribune suggests another plan which also seems plausible, and is not liable to the objection of being a novelty in legislation. Like the plurality rule, it has venerable precedents on its side. The writer for the Tribune says:

"Since all other expedients have failed, it is now suggested that a Speaker should be chosen by ballot instead of viva voce. This was the uniform usage from the foundation of the Government down to 1838. During the memorable contest between Mr. Bell and Mr. Polk for the Speakership, the friends of Gen. Jackson feared that some of his followers might prefer Mr. Bell, who ran in opposition to the Administration, and the viva voce vote was submitted as a mode of coercion, with the expectation that the doubtful members would not openly dare to rebel the known wishes of the President. The practice then inaugurated has been followed ever since, but there is no good reason why it should be continued. The belief is entertained that if the ballot should be adopted, the House could be organized in a few days. The fact is known that a considerable interest on the other side really desire this dead-lock relieved, who have not the moral courage to confront the dictatorial demands made by self-constituted leaders. The pretext of consitutional objections urged by Mr. Miles and others against the plurality, could not be mooted upon a proposition which long experience sanctioned, and which conforms exactly to the spirit of our institutions.

"Intelligence here from the West represents that the Democracy have suffered seriously by the developments and disunion sentiments of the Southern managers since the meeting of Congress. In many places their organization has been boldly repudiated, and in others they have gone over in numbers to the Republicans. It is freely admitted here by Democrats that one half of the seventeen members from the West have probably lost their seats by voting for Know Nothing candidates for the Speakership, who were put up without any regard to their fitness or embarrassments. Some of them have been careful enough to avoid this blunder, but still have suffered from contact with the fire-eaters, whose only policy is rule or ruin.

EXCITED CATHOLIC ORGAN.—The New York Tablet, an organ of the Catholic Church and supporter of the democratic party, is greatly excited over the recent outrages perpetrated upon Irish Catholics of the South. In speaking upon this subject, the Tablet says:

"If the safety of the Union is only to be accomplished by the proscription of the freedom of speech, the freedom of the Press, the freedom of circulation for every free citizen, by the destruction of the habeas corpus, by the substitution of mob and lynch law for that of the Courts of Justice, by the contenning of constitutional guarantees, then we say again the Union is not worth saving, and we, for one, would not lend a hand to save it."

MR. BAYARD, of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, will accept our thanks for the report of the State Agricultural Society for '57-8 —a bound volume of over six hundred pages.

DEATH OF MACAULAY THE HISTORIAN.—The list of distinguished dead in 1859 comprised the names of three men eminent as historians, viz: Prescott, Hallam, and Irving. To-day we have to add the name of a man equally eminent in the same department of literature. The steamship Europa, which left Liverpool on the last day of the year, brings the unexpected news of the death of Baron Macaulay. This is an event that will create a real and deep feeling of regret wherever the English language is read.

Thomas Babington Macaulay was the son of Zachary Macaulay, an English merchant, largely engaged in the African trade. He was born in the year 1790, entered at Trinity College, gaining some of the highest honors, taking his bachelor's degree in 1822, and obtaining a fellowship shortly after. He then studied at Lincoln's Inn, and was called to the bar in 1829. But his tastes were wholly literary, and he never made any figure as a barrister.

He began to write for the Edinburgh Review in the year 1829, and for twenty years he contributed regularly to that work, his brilliant papers arising the Review to a degree of importance and popularity that it had never previously reached, and from which it has decidedly declined since Macaulay, through other occupations, was obliged to cease writing for its pages.

His prose occupied his pen chiefly. But while yet in college he had written that glorious martial lyric, "The Battle of Ivry," and twenty-five years later appeared his "Lays of Ancient Rome," which are unsurpassed by any poems of the same class. The crowning work of his literary career has been his "History of England" since the accession of James II., the first volume of which appeared in 1848—three volumes having since been published.

It is understood that one or two other volumes have been for some time ready for the press. But the completion of the work is prevented by the sudden death of its author. As a picturesque narrative of English history, political, military and social, this work has never been equalled. Its fault is its partiality and prejudices; its excessive laudation of its author's favorites, and undue depreciation of those whom [illegible] into his favor. No one can deny his bitter [illegible] William III. a great and better [illegible] Penn and [illegible] his illustrations [illegible] his political life has moved side by side [illegible] literary life. He was an active Whig, at one [illegible] period of his manhood, was made by that party a Commissioner of Bankrupts, and was returned to the House of Commons from Calne, Wiltshire, in 1832. [Correspondence of the Daily Pittsburgh Gazette.]

HARRISBURG, Jan. 18, 1860.

Eds. Gazette: The business of legislation progresses slowly, and if the experience of the session, so far, is to be taken as an index, there will not be as many bills as usual to act upon as heretofore. The Senate has but one or two bills upon its files not acted on, and the House file is still quite a small one.

In the Senate, to-day, there were no bills of any importance introduced, and none reported from committees. The bill from the House relative to Geo. Calohan's accounts, was passed, and Mr. Bell's resolutions favoring the election of a temporary Speaker in Congress, were defeated by a party vote, yeas 9, nays 17. Mr. Bell urged their adoption strongly, and Mr. Penney, in a neat and conclusive speech, exploded his logic completely. Mr. Smith also made some forcible remarks on the same side.

The last Senate authorized the printing of 3000 copies of the Catalogue of the State Library, and the Sergeant of Arms is now delivering them. The postage on there books is 80 cents each; and in order to prevent the distribution at this session of the whole number, at a cost for postage of $2,400, Mr. Penney will to-morrow introduce a resolution to file them away for the use of future sessions. Those in want of one can at any time secure it by writing to any Senator for it.

In the House, a large number of bills was introduced, as follow:

By Mr. Shepherd: relative to Landlord and tenant.

By Mr. Gunnison: to equalize the distribution of estates of deceased husbands and wives.

By Mr. Proudfoot: to enable the borough of Johnstown to levy a paving tax.

By Mr. Thompson: to encourage the destruction of noxious animals.

By Mr. Benton: relative to licenses in Clearfield county.

By Mr. Pressley: supplement to an act incorporating the Chartiers tp. turnpike company, and a supplement to the act incorporating the Allegheny Gas Company.

By Mr. Espy: a supplement to the act incorporating the Pittsburgh Bridge Co., and an act to incorporate the Pittsburgh and Mansfield Passenger and Freight Railway Co.

By Mr. Walker: to repeal the 3d section of the School law.

These were all appropriately referred. The Judiciary (local) Committee reported with a negative recommendation the bill from your city to enable Aldermen and Justices of the Peace to retain their dockets after the expiration of their office. This negative recommendation is equivalent to its defeat, unless interest strong enough to rally a two-thirds vote can be got up for it.

The resolutions from the Senate relative to the organization of Congress, occupied most of the day in the House, an afternoon session having been held to hear the speeches upon them. The democrats moved to go into Committee of the Whole for general amendment, but this was voted down, yeas 54, nays 50. Mr. Strong, of Philadelphia, then moved to go into committee to amend by substituting a very mild resolution in favor of the plurality rule, but this was lost, yeas 39, nays 52. The resolutions were then put on their passage, and passed, yeas 63, nays 32.

The speeches upon these resolutions were quite able. Messrs. Thompson, Kinney, Lawrence, of Washington, Williston, Strong and O'Neill all made excellent speeches upon the Republican side. R.

The State Agricultural Society met to day and elected the following officers:

President—Joseph S. Halderman.

Vice Presidents—1st District, George W. Woodward; 2d, Geo. Cadwallader; 3d, James Gowen; 4th, Robert Hare Powell; 5th, Thomas P. Knox; 6th, George Thomas; 7th, Adrian Cornell; 8th, Geo. M. Lauman; 9th, Coleman Henderson; 10th, Rod. Peters; 11th, Amos L. Kapp; 12th, E. W. Sturdevant; 13th, Henry D. Maxwell; 14th, Henry Drinker; 15th, John B. Beck; 16th, Chr. Eberley; 17th, Wm Heyser; 18th, Elias Baker; 19th, Wm. A. Stokes; 20th, Joshua Wright; John Murdoch, Jr.; 22d, John Young, Jr; 23d, Thos. J. Power; 24th, Henry Souther; 25th, James Miles.

Additional Members of the Executive Committee—1. G. McKinley, David Taggart, Wm. Colder, Jr., Jacob Mish, John H. Ziegler.

Corresponding Secretary—A. Boyd Hamilton.

Chemist and Geologist—S. S. Halldeman.

Librarian—Henry Gilbert.

This ticket was not like one agreed upon by the regular members of the Society, but differed from it in five of the names. It was got up by the Harrisburg people, who paid their dollar each, voted, and elected it. The purpose is supposed to be to turn out Judge Hiester as Secretary and select Harrisburg as the place for the next State Fair.

Under the constitution as it stood, any one could vote at the annual elections upon paying the fee of a dollar; but the Society, two days after the election, amended the constitution so as to permit no one to vote who joins the society after the annual State Fair.

THE DINNER TO THE HON. BAILIE PEYTON AT PHILADELPHIA.—Among the letters received from invited guests who could not attend was the following from the Hon. John Sherman.

WASHINGTON, January 10, 1860.

Gentlemen:—The claims of public duty here will deny me the pleasure of participating in person personally in the compliment which you have tendered to the Hon. Bailie Peyton. I regret this the more since one of the objects intended is to "bring together men of position and influence from different sections of our common country, in order that they may unite in such an expression of sentiment as will tend to promote peace and good-will throughout the Union."

No man, North or South who is animated by a patriotic impulse, or who appreciates his citizenship in its high and national sense, can hesitate to approve the "expression of sentiment" which you propose. Events have recently occurred which the reason and justice of the country deplore and condemn, not only as wrong in themselves, but calculated to loosen the ties of fraternity and fellowship by which our people should be bound together. The unworthy attempts of partizans to charge the whole responsibility of those individual acts upon a whole section, and to engage it before the world as sympathizing with such criminality has provoked a feeling of deep indignation because of this shameful injustice. The North knows its duties and its rights, and means to fulfil the one and to assert the other in this Union and under the Constitution. It has no desire to infringe upon any right of the South, nor to encourage, palliate, or justify outrages upon or intrusion of its territory, or any means by which they may be incited, nor to disturb those relations of brotherhood by which they have grown into the dignity and proportion of a great nation.

The Constitution was framed and adopted in a spirit of conciliation and mutual concession. If we do not inherit all the virtues, we may at least cherish the precept and the example of the fathers who perfected that work of wisdom and patriotism. In the dark hours of the Republic, when civil commotion threatened perils more serious than the rash ravings of disunionists and agitators now do, that Constitution proved to be our refuge and safety. Let us cling to it in this period of discord and strife as the best hope and guide, each section vieing with the other in renewing its devotion to all the compromises under which it was formed and all the obligations which it imposes. Accepted with this purpose, there will be no North or South, or East, or West, but a contented and happy people, enjoying the blessings and sharing the prosperity of a common and glorious Union. With high respect,

JOHN SHERMAN.

REMARKABLE MEDICAL SPECULATION.—AN INVASION OF ORGAN-GRINDERS.—A ship which arrived the other day from Havre had a goodly number of steerage passengers, mostly from the Rhine; and among them, as part of their effects, was a goodly number of hand-organs. The voyage was of nearly two months' duration, and the quarered, of course, by storms, gales and fair winds. Whenever the weather and sea admitted of it, the steerage passengers flocked on deck; and true to their German instincts, got up waltzes, polkas and mazurkas, the music being furnished by the various organs on board.

One day when the ship was near the mouth of the Mississippi, the solitary cabin passenger on board became struck by the large number of hand-organs; it seemed strange that so many instruments of the kind should have accidentally got together on one vessel. On inquiry, it was ascertained that every one of the organs, last [illegible] seeing through various villages in Rhine, [illegible] branch localities near the who, he found, [illegible] the good people, American in the fall, [illegible] to emigrate to circles, in the city and country, in the Northern southern and western States, the favorite musical instrument was the hand-organ.

Doubtless the traveller had suffered fortunes at some epoch of his life from broken-down, harsh, dissonant organs, and he thus sought to [illegible] himself. His trick resulted in the simi[illegible] going into a hand-organ speculat[illegible]ithize with the speculators; we [illegible]'s boldness and humor; we [illegible] of those organs.—N.

EXTRACT FROM THE MONTREAL DEMOCRAT
Dr. BORT will shortly return to London, that being his fourth visit during the months visit being a short one, but long enough to insure him a cordial welcome whenever he revisits us. He has proved to all who had any professional intercourse with him, that he is not only a scientific Oculist and Aurist, with the true judgment of a man skilled in his profession, but combines in his dealings that of a gentleman in its full measure. His advertisements are not such as are usually put forth by those who profess in public prints to cure every possible ailment which flesh is heir-to, but they bear the stamp of a man who is master of his art. Dr. B. despises the empiric and quack as much as any one, he will he stoop to deceive anybody by false hope, or by warrant ing cures by any other means generally employed by those who dwell artifices to get patients, and then give them their nostrums, which have really no other worth than the means of getting some fees only of the applicants. Dr. B's prescription have been examined by the best physicians and chemists that we have in our Provinces. He has no secret in his office, nor whatever he does in his profession; nor are he testimonials from that class of persons who commonly give so-liced certificates, but they are of the very best authorities, and he fully deserves the confidence of any community that he may visit. We advise all to call on him before he leaves us."

Dyspepsia! Dyspepsia!! Dyspepsia!!!
What is it? How Cured?

DYSPEPSIA is our National Disease—weak stomach, feeble digestion, distress after eating, costive habit, bilious constitution. How many suffer with it and its attendant symptoms of low spirits, bad taste, coated tongue, obstructed head and attacks of headache! Yet how few know how to cure it! Generally, because the bowels are constipated, resort is had to cathartics, or laxatives; but such a condition was never cured by cathartics, whose only office is to weaken the digestion and impair the activity of the entire assimilative system.

But HUMPHREY'S HOMŒOPATHIC PILLS—a simple medicated sugar pill—have cured hundreds of the worst and most obstinate cases. This is done simply by improving the tone of bowel and restoring the integrity of the digestive organs, from which result good appetite, regular habits, a clear head and buoyant spirits. Such a medicine is a gem, and only requires to be known to be appreciated.
