PITTSBURGH:

FRIDAY MORNING, JAN. 20, 1860.

BURNING OF THE WESTERN FEMALE COLLEGE AT OXFORD.—The college was situated about three-fourths of a mile from Oxford, and quite a distance from any other house. There was but one man about the building when the fire was first discovered, and as his presence was necessary, it devolved upon a company of young ladies to run to town and give the alarm. The building was first discovered to be on fire about 12½ o'clock at night, when the inmates were aroused—175 young ladies were attending the institution—and a delegation dispatched to arouse the people, while remaining teachers and pupils formed a line for bucket passing; and every one labored valiantly, until informed by Miss Peabody the Principal—that it would be impossible to extinguish the fire, and that each one should repair to her room and save such articles as she thought most important. As the building took fire at the top and burned downwards, it afforded much opportunity for the removing of property from the lower stories, and most of the private property and trunks were saved, except those of the fifth story occupants, most of whom lost everything but the scanty clothing hastily put on at the first alarm.

The escape of Miss Sallie E. Moore, from the College, is unparalled for daring, and seems almost miraculous. She roomed in the 5th story, and returned the second time to her room for some books; on opening her door she discovered that the hall was dense with smoke, and the stairway was in flames, and all means of exit in that direction hopeless. Closing her door, she deliberately tore the bed clothing into strips, knotted them firmly together, and tying them to her bedpost, she hopefully stepped from her window, and made a successful descent to the ground, a distance of 46 feet. We could hardly believe when we saw this spare, young girl, that she was capable of such a heroic action; but she thought it was not "so wonderful, after all."

One of the most remarkable incidents connected with the burning—and by many interpreted as an omen of good—was the long exemption of the Principal's room from destruction. Nearly the entire building had been consumed, and the devouring element had invaded every other room, and some of the walls had fallen, but here the curtains still hung protected, the room was dark and quiet within, as if some spirit of preservation commanded the flames to halt.

Steps will be immediately taken to re erect the College, and it is designed to have it ready for occupation against September next.

AND PHŒNIX BITTERS.

In cases of Scrofula, Ulcers, Fevers, or Eruptions of the Skin, the operation of the LIFE MEDICINES is truly astonishing, often removing, in a few days, every vestige of those loathsome diseases, by their purifying effects on the blood. Bilious Fevers, Fever and Ague, Dyspepsia Irregularities, and in short, most all diseases, soon yield to their operation promptly. No family should be without them, as by their timely use much suffering and expense may be saved.
