SU	Inding his wife was not at home, and hearing that she was in company with this Datchman, whom he no doubt heard lived in Birmingham, he started in that direction with jeslousy and rengeance in his heart, determined, as testified he had exclaimed to Helen McGraw, to "make his wife feel him before she slept," and if this be so, and he was not in that vicinity in the transaction of his regular business, he is guilty of murder in the first degree. But if he did meat them casually, the offense can be no less than murder in the second degree. The gantle- man, after delving into the minute particulars of the case, concluded with an eloquent perora- tion, hoping the jury would do justice both to the Commonwealth and the defendant. Mr. Swartzwider, for the defense, after ad- verting to the points presented for the considera- tion of the coart, applied binself to an earcest address to the jury. He said the jury were there, not to convict the defendant, but to elicit the irnth. He gaves number of axioms of law bearing upon a trial of a man for his life. He contended that Jones, after hearing of the faith- lessness of his wife, and while in the puruance which the declaration of Jones establishes, and under the frenzy created by all the circumstances which the declaration of Jones establishes, and under the frenzy created by all the circumstances which the doclaration of Jones establishes, and under the frenzy created by all the circumstances which the doclaration of Jones establishes, and under the frenzy created by all the circumstances which the doclaration and after a strangle, during which be woom drew a kaife upon him, he usaiched the weapon himself and slew her. The defondant could have no motive for the commis- sion of the sot, were not the statement truo which he made to All. Togeers. His previous good character is another point which would lead to a doubt of such a deed being done under any other circumstances.
