For Sale & To Let.

The Power and the Purse.—How the idea became so general, that farming is a business requiring but little knowledge, and little natural ability for its successful prosecution, is a question that has puzzled us much. That this idea has been, if it is not now general among those in other trades and professions, it is idle to deny. To say that a man is a farmer is equivalent, in the view of many, to saying that he is an honest, plodding kind of a person, who knows enough to plow and sow and grow corn, and feed cattle, but is entirely unfit for a legislator, or for taking any active part in the government of the country, or in anything else requiring quick perception, and an active, well-trained mind.

The merchant, the lawyer, or the manufacturer, after having acquired a competence, often feels a desire for rural pursuits, as a kind of pastime. He wishes for a little diversion from the great and intellectual work in which he is engaged, and which he imagines to be wearing upon the brain. For this, there is nothing like farming, as it can make but very little demand upon that delicate and over-taxed organ, and afford an opportunity for air and exercise. It will require some thought, to be sure, but not enough to make a ripple on the great ocean of his vast mind. He buys a farm within a few hours of his residence, and employs what farm laborers are deemed necessary—and help will do, with a master mind to direct. But, strange to say, things don't go right. There seems to be a perverseness about Nature that he had never noticed before. He never had such a feeling idea of the fall and its penalty—"cursed is the ground"—thorns and thistles shall it bring forth for thee." The crops are poor where they should be good, and in some places, lacking where an abundance was anticipated. The only persons that ever admired the place, or complimented the proprietor, were a couple of roving botanists, in search of a fine collection of natural plants, and they threw up their hands in perfect delight at the first sight of his own cornfield. At the end of the year he finds himself a few thousand out, though he had the best evidence on purchasing, the farm was a good one, and paid a fair profit over expenses. He is surprised, and the neighbors laugh and say nothing. It is tried another year, with even a worse result, and the thing is abandoned, the owner concluding that he is altogether too wise, his perception too quick, his mind too active, and too well trained for a farmer.

Another of the same class but possessing more common sense acts differently. He hires a good practical farmer, and to him delivers large counsels and wise instructions, but he soon learns how incapable he is of giving instruction worthy of being followed, and a mutual appreciation and understanding is soon established between the employer and the employed, which amounts to about this: the one shall talk as he likes, and the other act as he thinks best, it being at the same time understood that the privilege of talking wise before visitors, and making speeches at fairs and other agricultural meetings is reserved for the employer, who is also to have the right to tell what great things "I" am doing uncontradicted, and of generally writing and talking up a great farmer, and the instructor of the less intelligent and enterprising as fast as possible.

Another class of farmer's friends are very anxious to become their scientific instructors.—With fair scientific attainments, or, perhaps, with only a superficial knowledge of chemistry and a smattering of geology, they feel great pity for farmers on account of their ignorance, and particularly of these sciences nearly related to agriculture. They are very anxious to give them the benefit of their great acquirements; to elevate the profession to its proper position, and themselves to places of profit and distinction. This is a very accommodating class—extremely self-sacrificing—always ready to let their light shine, and never extinguishing the least idea of putting it under a bushel—consequently they are on hand, on all suitable and unsuitable occasions, to figure in agricultural addresses and lectures, write prize essays—which are deemed to be extremely wise because extremely unintelligible—institute agricultural schools or colleges, or fill offices in those already established, or to endorse the compound of any patent manure manufacturer who is wise or unwise enough to make it an object for them to do so. With them the opinion of Liebig, or any smaller agricultural chemist, is both law and gospel, which it would be the height of folly to question, while the experience of a hundred practical men, for a series of years, is but a succession of blunders.

We like the signs of the times. Farmes are not much longer to be deceived. They have always thought, and they are beginning to talk for themselves. We see abundance of evidence, of this in the discussions held at different places the past winter. In some cases practioners have received a check that, if not very flattering, will prove, we have no doubt, very useful. Let the good work go on. Insist on a reason for all statements that appear unreasonable, or that do not accord with your experience, and never fear to give your experience freely and manfully.—An ounce of experience is worth pounds of untried theory.—[Rural New Yorker.

D. MOTT'S
CHALYBEATE RESTORATIVE
PILLS OF IRON.

AN APERIENT AND STOMACHIC Preparation of IRON purified of Oxygen and Carbon by combustion in Hydrogen. Sanctioned by the highest Medical Authorities, both in Europe and the United States, and prescribed in their practice.

The experience of thousands daily proves that no preparation of Iron can be compared with it. Impurities of the blood, depression of vital energy, pain and other evils of complaints of delicate fibre, it unerringly in almost every conceivable case. IRON, as in all maladies in which it has been tried, it has proved absolutely curative in each of the following complaints, viz:

Debility, Nervous Affections, Emaciation, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Incipient Consumption, Scrofulous Tuberculosis, Salt Rheum, Consumptive Sweats, Whites, Chlorosis, Liver Complaints, Chronic Headaches, Rheumatism, Intermittent Fevers, Pimples on the Face, &c.

In cases of General Debility, whether the result of acute disease or of the continued diminution of nervous and muscular energy from chronic complaints, one trial of this remedy has proved successful to an extent which no description nor written attestation would render credible. Invalids so long bed-ridden as to have become forgotten in their own neighborhoods, have suddenly re-appeared in the busy world as if just returned from protracted travel in a distant land. Some very signal instances of this kind are situated of female sufferers, emaciated victims of apparent marasmus, sanguineous exhaustion, critical changes, and that complication of nervous and dyspeptic aversion to air and exercise for which the physician has no cause.

In Nervous Affections of all kinds, and for reasons familiar to medical men, the operation of this preparation of iron is not necessarily so salutary, for, unlike the old crudes, its vigorously tonic, without being exciting and overheating and gently, regularly aperient, even in the most obstinate cases of costiveness, without ever being a gastric purgative, or inflicting a disagreeable sensation.

It is this latter property, among others, which makes it so remarkably effectual and permanent a remedy for Piles, upon which it also appears to exert a distinct and specific action, by dispersing the local congestion which forms them.

In Dyspepsia, innumerable as are its causes, a single box of these Chalybeate Pills has often suffered for the most habitual cases, including the attendant Costiveness.

In unchecked Diarhœa, even when advanced to Dysentery, continued, emaciating, and apparently malignant, the effects have been equally decisive and astonishing.

In the local pains, loss of flesh and strength, debilitating cough, and remitting hectic, which generally indicate Incipient Consumption, this remedy has alleged the alarm of friends and physicians, in several very gratifying and interesting instances.

In Scrofulous Tuberculosis, this medicated iron has had far more than the good effect of the most cautiously balanced preparations of iodine, without any of their well known liabilities.

The attention of families cannot be too confidently invited to this remedy and restorative, in the cases peculiarly affecting them:

In Rheumatism, both chronic and inflammatory—in the latter, however, more decidedly—it has been invariably well reported, both as alleviating pain and reducing the swellings and stiffness of the joints and muscles.

In Intermittent Fever it must necessarily be a great invigorant and energetic restorative, and its progress in the whole history, will probably be one of high
