Great Excitement in Trieste.

The Common Council of Trieste has been thrown into the utmost consternation by the arrest of several of the most prominent merchants and bankers of that city, on a charge of being implicated in the recently discovered frauds in the Austrian army. Among them are Rivoltella, who was the son of the Austrian Lloyd's and of the principal financial and mercantile interesrests of the place, and who has but recently purchased a country seat near Trieste, worth $600,000; Mondolfo, who has branch houses in Venice and Milan; and who ranks among the most spirited, able, and enterprising, as well as wealthy merchants of Treiste; Brambilla, another of the notabilities, whose influence on the Exchange of Trieste was almost as great as that of the Rothschilds; Perugia, whose sister married the Trieste agent of the Rothschilds (Mr. Landau, who is attached at the same time to the banking house of Morpurgo & Tarente,) and who also occupied a distinguished position in the Wall street of Trieste. The ladies of the family of Mr. Brambilla, and some of those connected with other parties arrested, are among the most fashionable women of Trieste, where they moved in the very highest society.

This event is considered as peculiarly fatal to the Austrian dynasty, for the Trieste, bankers and the merchants, whose arrest has now come necessary, were among its most fervent supporters, and so intimately associated with the financial concerns of the empire, that the integrity of the one cannot be shaken without giving a terrible blow to the prestige of the other. The Rothchilds, and all the other minor stars in the financial firmament in Europe, who have always been so anxious to support the rotten pillars of despotic government, will henceforth be looked upon with increased distrust, not only by the masses of the people, but by the very autocrats whose interests they have been (for reasons best known to themselves) so anxious to promote.

Another awkward circumstance connected with the Trieste catastrophe is the intimate personal relation of Baron Bruck, the Austrian Minister, with the parties implicated. Baron Bruck, as is well known was originally a Trieste merchant, and a colleague of the very men whom it has now become his destiny to assign to the dungeons. His wife, Miss Buschek, is also a Triestine, and all his relations, both social and financial, are more or less connected with Trieste. This affair is almost as great a calamity for the house of Hapsburg as the battle of Solferino itself.—[N. Y. Tribune.

THE CULTIVATION IN THE UNITED STATES.—The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer writes:

The progress of the experiments in acclamatizing the tea plant, so far as heard from, is favorable, and there is reason to believe that it can be grown in open air south of the northern line of North Carolina and Tennessee. Eighteen thousand plants have been sent into this Southern Region, and eight thousand more have been distributed to persons in the Northern States owning green-houses, as objects of curiosity.

A report on the introduction of the tea plant in the journal of the United States Agricultural Society (recently issued,) gives due credit to Dr. Junius Smith, who established a tea plantation near Greenville, South Carolina, in 1851. An interesting letter is given, dated July 4th of that year, in which Dr. Smith chronicles the drinking of tea of his own growing. It is also stated that some of Dr Smith's plants, dispersed after his death, have been successfully cultivated in the upper counties of South Carolina.
