DR. R. A. WILSON'S

Tonic, Cathartic and Anti-Dyspeptic

PILLS.

WILSON'S PILLS have had a more local existence for over twenty years, unsupported by advertising of any kind, and build at double the price of what they are now sold at, yet with all those disadvantages, wherever used they have in no instance failed to render the utmost satisfaction in performing all the requirements of a valuable family medicine, and as such are recommended by a use of the most worthy and responsible citizens of the land. Hear for instance what Col. William Hopkins, of Washington, Pa., says:

From Col. Wm. Hopkins, late Canal Commissioner of the State

WASHINGTON, January 3, 1858.

DR. R. A. WILSON, Pittsburgh, Pa.—I have been using your Anti-Dyspeptic Pills, when occasion required, for many years, and can truthfully say that I have never found any medicine equal to them in relieving me from affections of the stomach and heart; they have never failed to relieve me from headache, and have always left my system in better condition than they found it. I must confidently commend your Pills as a safe and highly valuable medicine.

Yours, respectfully, WM. HOPKINS.

Hear Dr. Keyser.

MESSRS B L FAHNESTOCK & Co—I hatehad considerable experience in the use of the extraordinary Pill compounded by Dr. R. Adams Wilson, of which you are now the proprietors, and have often felt their healing influence in my own case for Nervous Headache, arising from a disordered condition of the stomach. Dr. Wilson possessed them for this in cases of hemicranias and other forms of headache depending on a deranged and irritable condition of the stomach and digestive organs, for which they seem peculiarly adapted, being entirely free from any griping tendency. I regard them as a very valuable Pill, and one that purges, without at all debilitating.

Yours, truly,

GEO. H. KEYSER.

Cutaneous Weaning Machine.

CLOTHING, TIME AND LABOR SAVED.

Indispensable to House-keepers.

THE MOST SIMPLE, ECONOMICAL and durable article ever offered to the public to alleviate the discomforts of wash day.

Description.

It consists of a metal cylinder, with the ribs on the inside, and an interior cylinder of wood with ribs. There is a space of from 6 to 8 inches between the two cylinders. One crank turns both cylinders at the same time in opposite directions, rapidly creating a suction, forcing the water through the clothes, and effectively removing the dirt. The action of the water does the work quickly, dispenses with rubbing with rubbing, and thus saves the wear of clothes.

PITTSBURGH:

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 6.

Honest Abe of the West.

All—"Star Spangled banner."

[Written expressly for the Press and Tribune.]

O hark! from the pine-crested hill-tops of Maine,
Where the splendor first falls from the wings of the morning,
And away to the West, over river and plain,
Rings out the gra d notions of Liberty's warning!
From green rolling prairie it swells to the sea,
For the people have risen, victorious and free;
They have chosen their leader, and bravest and best
Of them all is Old Abe, Honest Abe of the West!

The spirit that fought for the patriots of old
Has swept through the land and stunned us forever;
In the pure air of freedom it spreads unfold
Qt to Marshal us on to the sacred endeavor:
Proudly the banner of freemen we bear:
Noble the hope that enfolds it there:
And where battle is thickest we follow the crest
Of gallant Old Abe, Honest Abe of the West!

There's a triumph in ungle g a glorious cause,
Though the lords of life be for a while may be stronger,
Pushing on for just rulers and holier laws,
Till their lowering rule can oppose no longer
But ours the bold hearts of them who have past
Through the struggle of years, and are victors at last
So forward, all ye Freemen, to the rescue!
And trust in Old Abe, Honest Abe of the West!

Let no the bright scroll of the Future unfold!
Bead forms and fair cities shall crown our devotion—
From labor into the homesteads bold,
And the future of her native speech ocean to ocean;
Barges shall float on the dark river wave,
With a wealth never seen by the fathers of slaves!
And the Chief, in whose rule all the land shall be blest
Is our noble Old Abe, Honest Abe of the West!

Then on to the holy Republican strife!
And again, for a Future as fair as the morning,
For the sake of that freedom more precious than life,
Ring out the grand anthem of Liberty's warning!
Lift the banner on high, child from mountain to plain
The cheers of the people are sounded again;
Hurrah! for the cause—all cause the best!
Hurrah! for Old Abe, Honest Abe of the West!

A VISIT TO MR. LINCOLN.—A correspondent of the New York Post gives that paper an account of a visit made to Mr. Lincoln at his home, Springfield, after the Chicago nomination. He says:

"It had been reported by some of Mr. Lincoln's political enemies that he was a man who lived in the lowest hoosier style,' and I thought I would see for myself. Accordingly, as soon as the business of the convention was closed, I took the cars for Springfield. I found Mr. Lincoln living in a handsome, but not pretentious, double two-story frame, house, having a wide hall running through the centre, with parlors on both sides, neatly, but not ostentatiously, furnished. It was just such a dwelling as a majority of the well to do residents of the fine western towns occupy. Every thing about it had a look of comfort and independence. The library, I remarked in passing, particularly, and I was pleased to see long rows of books, which told of the scholarly tastes and culture of the family.

"Lincoln received us with great, and to me, surprising urbanity. I had seen him before in New York, and brought with me an impression of his awkward and ungainly manner; but in his own house, where he doubtless feels himself freer than in the strange New York circles, he had thrown this off, and appeared easy, if not graceful. He is, as you know, a tall, lank man, with a long neck, and his ordinary movements are unusually angular, even out West. As soon, however, as he gets interested in conversation, his face lights up and his attitudes and gestures assume a certain dignity and impressiveness. His conversation is fluent, agreeable and polite. You see at once from it that he is a man of decided and strong character. His viewsare all his own; such as he has worked out from a patient and varied scrutiny of life, and not such as he has learned from others. Yet he cannot be called opinionated. He listens to others like one eager to learn, and his replies evince at the same time both modesty and self-reliance. I should say that one prominent trait was the principal quality of his mind, although he has a striking phrase or word reveals a peculiar vein of thought. He tells a story well, with a strong idiomatic smack, and seems to relish humor both in himself and others. Our conversation was mainly political, but of a general nature One thing Mr. Lincoln remarked which I will venture to repeat. He said that in the coming Presidential canvass he was wholly uncommitted to any cabals or cliques and that he meant to keep himself free from them, and from all pledges and promises.

"I had the pleasure, also, of a brief interview with Mrs. Lincoln, and, in the circumstances of these persons, I trust I am not trespassing on the sanctities of private life in saying a word in regard to that lady. Whatever of awkwardness may be ascribed to her husband, there is none of it in her. On the contrary, she is quite a pattern of lady-like courtesy and polish. She converses with freedom and grace, and is thoroughly au fait in all the little amenities of society. Mr. S. Lincoln belongs, by the mother's side to the Preston family of Kentucky, and has received a liberal and refined education.

"Mr. Lincoln's early life, as you know, was passed in the roughest kind of experience on the frontier, and among the roughest sort of people. Yet, I have been told that, in the face of all these influences, he is a strictly temperate man, never using wine or strong drink; and, stranger still he does not 'twist the filthy weed,' nor smoke, nor use profane language of any kind."

A RARE CASE FOR PLAYWRIGHTS.—There is a very curious case to be tried at the next session of the Paris Tribunal. The circumstances, which seem more like the fanciful creation of a novelist than real facts, are as follows:

"Nearly thirty years ago a widow lady, of a noble and powerful Huguenot family residing in the south of France, placed her child with a gardener's wife, who was to act as foster-mother and nurse to the heir of the vast family estate. One day, as the young heir was sporting before the door and the gardner's child was lying on a bed in the cottage, the nurse heard the wheels of a carriage, and immediately suspected that the mother of her young charge was coming to see her son. In her hurry she snatched up the heir, but slipping, let him fall upon a heap of stones, breaking his right arm and collar-bone. In her terror she rushed to her husband, who advised her to stow away the screaming victim under the bed clothes, and taking his garments, he placed them on his own child and boldly stood at the door to wait the lady's coming. Contrary to the usual casual glance given by her on her previous visits, the lady-mother was so struck at the change in her darling, to the lean, brown, hungry-looking babe which she beheld in the place of her own plump baby, that, vexed and exasperated beyond measure, she seized the child in her arms and bid the postillion drive away. The gardner and his wife were terribly frightened, but decided to go the next day to the chateau and make an explanation. To their further consternation, they found on the next morning that the lady was gone, and had taken away the child. Years sped on, and the family did not return, while ignorant cottagers, influenced by terror, never dare to stir in the matter, until the gardner's wife on her death bed recently made a full confession.

In the meantime the cottager's child had passed his life as a member of one of the noblest families of France, had been attached to an embassy and now holds a desirable official position, while the real heir has spent his youth in discipline and privation as a soldier in Algeria. The latter now brings suit to recover his property and title, and the trial promises to be one of the most extraordinary of modern times. Derryer, now probably the most celebrated lawyer in France, has been retained for the defense."

CATTLE DISEASE IN RHODE ISLAND.—The Rhode Island Society for the encouragement of Domestic Industry, has taken this subject in hand. At a special meeting of the Standing Committee, held on Monday evening, to consider the best means of escaping a visitation of the pestilence, it was agreed to memorialize the General Assembly in reference to it. A memorial was prepared and presented. They suggest the necessity of legislation regulating the bringing of cattle into this State, and providing for a strict and rigid scrutiny in relation thereto, either through a board of commissioners or the town authorities, requiring every person to give notice to such board or authorities if any animal in his possession shall be attacked with this disease, and authorising such board or town authorities to make orders for the killing of any animal so diseased, and for the rigid seclusion and separation of all that have been in contact with a diseased animal, and a proper compensation to the owners.

SELLING A FREE MAN AT AUCTION.—A Communication to the Cincinnati Gazette from Newport, Kentucky, states that Charles Wagner, an alleged fugitive slave, is to be sold at auction on Monday last, June 4th. It appears that he had been induced to leave Cincinnati, and was carried across the river into Kentucky. There he was arrested as a runaway, the men who had kidnapped him claiming a reward of seventy five dollars. By threats and menaces he was led to confess that he had a master, but no one has appeared to claim, and it is believed that he told the story at the suggestion of these men. He is now to be sold into servitude, without any opportunity to prove his freedom, to pay the reward and the fees of the officers. The balance, if there be any, goes to the treasury of Kentucky.

THEODORE PARKER sank very quietly into the arms of death, on the evening of the 10th inst. He left written directions for his funeral, limiting the number of attendants to the grave to five. He desired the Blessings of Jesus, in the Sermon on the Mount, to be read over his grave; and then a plain grey stone, with his name and age alone inscribed. Before his death he had been dreamy, and talked ramblingly of two Theodore Parkers' one in Florence, and one planted in Boston, who would finish his work; perhaps a true thought, only mystically expressed. Among his last well connected words were these: "Of course, you know I am not afraid to die, though I wished to live and finish much work which I longed to do. I had great powers committed to me, and I have but half used them."

RAREY, the tamer of horses, has been spending a time in the desert of Arabia. On his way he subdued the ferocity of the Pacha's stud in Jerusalem, and displayed his "genius" in an exhibition before the resident Consuls. The Ayoub Bay, who presented the Hon. W H Seward with three fine Arabian horses, which are to be forwarded to this country by the first opportunity, ordered out the steeds for the inspection of Rarey, who declared himself better pleased with them than with any he had seen in Syria On the whole, he thinks the Arabian horses underrated and inferior to many he has seen at home.

The tooth that is sweet upon Maple Sugar will experience a thrill of satisfaction at the news that the crop of that succulent far exceeds that of any other year. Such large quantities have been raised and prices have ruled so low that in many sections the consumption of foreign sugars has been materially interfered with. In some towns in New Hamphire, Vermont and New York, what would be equal to ten or fifteen hogsheads of Cuba sugars have been made.

The largest amount of specie held by any one Bank in the United States is that by the Bank of Commerce, New York, $3,000,000; next, the Citizens' Bank, New Orleans, $3,140,000. The largest circulation of any one Bank is that of the Citizens' Bank, New Orleans, $4,689,000; next, the Louisiana State Bank, $2,432,000 No deposits and circulation together of the Citizens' Bank, New Orleans, at the last report, were $8,580,000

A LETTER from Havana states that Fowler, the defaulting Postmaster, is now in Havana, where he arrived by steamer from this city. This sets at rest the various rumors his having gone to Europe, Brazil and other places He has not been generally recognized in Havana, but the above information is deemed correct.

"I LOVE MY COUNTRY MORE THAN I LOVE MY PARTY."—So said Hannibal Hamlin, when the Democratic party repealed Missouri Compromise and re opened the agitation of the slavery question; and therefore resigned his position as Chairman of the Committee on Commerce in the Senate, and gave in his adhesion to the Republican movement.
