DR. R. A. WILSON'S

Tonic, Cathartic and Anti-Dyspeptic

PILLS.

WILSON'S PILLS have had a more local existence for over twenty years, unsupported by advertising of any kind, and sold at double the price of what they are now sold at, yet with all these disadvantages, wherever used they have in no instance failed to render the utmost satisfaction in performing all the requirements of a valuable family medicine, and as such are recommended by some of the most worthy and responsible citizens of the land. Hear for instance what Col. William Hopkins, of Washington, Pa., says:

From Col. Wm. Hopkins, late Canal Commissioner of the State.

WASHINGTON, January 6, 1859.

DR. R. A. WILSON, Pittsburgh, Pa.—I have been using your Anti-Dyspeptic Pills, when occasion required, for many years, and can truthfully say that I have never found any medicine equal to them in relieving me from affection of the stomach and heart; they have never failed to relieve me from headache, and have always left my system in better condition than they found it. I must confidently recommend your Pills as a safe and highly valuable medicine.

Yours, respectfully, WM HOPKINS.

Hear Dr. Keyser.

MESSRS B. L. FAHNESTOCK & Co.—I have had considerable experience in the use of the extraordinary Pill compounded by Dr. R. Adams Wilson, of which you are now the proprietors, and have often felt their benign influence in my own case for Nervous Headache, arising from a disordered condition of the stomach. I have likewise prescribed them for patients, in cases of hemicrania and other formsof headache depending on a deranged and irritable condition of the stomach and digestive organs, for which they seem peculiarly adapted, being entirely free from any griping tendency. I regard them as a very valuable Pill, and one that purges, without at all debilitating

Yours, truly, GEO. H. KEYSER.

Prepared and sold by B. L. FAHNESTOCK & CO., Wholesale Druggists, and Proprietors of B. L. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE, No 60, corner of Wood and Fourth streets, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold at retail by Druggists everywhere. fe22-3md&wp

MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS.

THIS HIGH AND ENVIED celebrity which this purely vegetable medicine has acquired for its invincible efficacy in all the diseases which it professes to cure, has induced the unnatural combinations posing not only on the credulity of the afflicted, but absolutely filching from their pockets their good works testify for them, and they thrive not by the faith of the deluded. In all cases of costiveness, dyspepsia, bilious and liver affections, headache, rheumatism, fevers and agues, obstinate head aches, and all general derangements of the system, Moffat's Life Pills have invariably proved a certain and speedy remedy. A single trial will place the Life Pills beyond the reach of competition in the estimation of every patient.

Dr. Moffat's Phœnix Bitters will be found equally efficacious in all cases of nervous debility, dyspepsia, headache, the sickness incident to females, &c. Prepared only by Dr. W. B. MOFFAT, 335 Broadway, New York, and by Medicine Dealers and Druggists generally throughout the country. fe8-3mdawT

ST. NICHOLAS HOTEL

BROADWAY,

NEW YORK.

WHEN completed six years ago the St. Nicholas was universally pronounced the most magnificent public convenience, and thoroughly organized establishment of the kind on this continent. What it was then it remains to-day—without a rival in size, in completeness, and in the general elements of comfort and enjoyment—The Hotel has accommodations for 1,000 guests, including complete suites of apartments for families. But few of these persons can be comfortably seated at the tables of its three public dining rooms, and nothing that modern art has contrived for the convenience and social gratification of the traveling public has been omitted in its plan, as it is in its practical details. The early reputation of the house at home and abroad, derived from its magnitude, its superb appointments, and its home-like comforts and its moderate charges, has been enhanced every year by the unwearied exertions of the proprietors. FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 8, 1860.

Thrilling Episode in the Life of "Abe Lincoln."

[Correspondence of the Cleveland Leader.]

As a Western man, I wish space to give vent to my enthusiasm over the nomination of Hon. Abraham Lincoln, for President of the United States, Mr. Lincoln, or "Old Abe," as his friends familiarly call him, is a self made man. A Kentuckian by birth, he emigrated to Illinois in his boyhood, where he earned his living at the anvil, devoting his leisure hours to study. Having chosen the law as his future calling, he devoted himself assiduously to its mastery, contending at every step with adverse fortune. During this period of study, he found a home under the hospitable roof of one Armstrong, a farmer who lived in a log house some eight miles from the village of Petersburg, Menard county. Here, clad in homespun, with elbows out, and knees covered with patches, young Lincoln would master his lessons by the firelight of the cabin, and then walk to town for the purpose of recitation. This man Armstrong was himself poor, but he saw the genius struggling in the young student, and opened to him his rude home and bid him welcome to his coarse fare. How Lincoln graduated with promise—how he has more than fulfilled that promise—how honorably he acquitted himself alike on battlefield, in defending our border settlements against the ravages of savage foes, and in the halls of our national legislature, are matters of history, and need no repetition here. But one little incident of a more private nature, standing as it does as a sort of sequel to something already alluded to, I deem worthy of record. Some few years since the oldest son of Mr. Lincoln old friend Armstrong, the chief support of his widowed mother—the good old man having some time previously passed from earth—was arrested on a charge of murder. A young man had been killed during a riotous melee, in the night time, at a campmeeting, and one of his associates stated that the death wound was struck by young Armstrong. A preliminary examination was gone into, at which the accuser testified so positively that there seemed no doubt of the guilt of the prisoner, and therefore he was held for trial. As is too often the case, the bloody act caused an undue degree of excitement in the public mind. Every improper incident in the life of the prisoner—each act which bore the least semblance of rowdyism—each schoolboy quarrel—was suddenly remembered and magnified, until they pictured him as a fiend of the most horrible hue. As these rumors spread abroad, they were received as gospel truth, and a fiendish desire for vengeance seized upon the infuriated populace, while only prison bars prevented a horrible death at the hands of a mob. The events were heralded in the county papers, painted in highest colors, accompanied by reasoning over the certainty of punishment being carried out to the guilty party. The prisoner, overpowered by the circumstances under which he found himself placed, fell into a melancholy condition, bordering upon despair, and the widowed mother, looking through her tears, saw no cause for hope from earthly aid.

At the juncture, the widow received a letter from Mr. Lincoln, volunteering his services in an effort to save the youth from the impending stroke. Gladly was the aid accepted, although it seemed impossible for even his sagacity to prevail in such a desperate case; but the heart of the attorney was to his work, and he set about it with a will that knew no such word as fail. Feeling that the poisoned condition of the public mind was such as to preclude the possibility of an impartial jury being got to the court having jurisdiction, he procured a change of venue and a postponement of the trial. He then went assiduously to work unraveling the history of the case, and I ascribed himself that his client was the victim of malice, and that the statements of the accuser were the result of falsehoods. When the trial was called on, the prosecutor, pale and emaciated, with hopelessness written on every feature, and accompanied by his half hoping, half despairing mother—whose only hope was in a mother's belief of her son's innocence, in the justice of the God who worshipped, and to the noble counsel, who without the hope of fee or reward upon earth, had undertaken the cause—took his seat in the prisoner's box, and with a "stony firmness" listened to the reading of the indictment. Lincoln sat quietly by, whilst the large auditory looked on him as though wondering what he could say in defence of one whose guilt they regarded as certain. The examination of the witnesses for the State was begun, and a well arranged mass of evidence, circumstantial and positive, was introduced, which seemed to impale the prisoner beyond the possibility of extrication. The counsel for the defense propounded but few questions, and those of a character which elicited no uneasiness on the part of the prosecutor —merely, in most cases, requiring the main witnesses to be definite as to the time and place. When the evidence of the prosecution was ended, Lincoln introduced a few witnesses to remove some erroneous impressions in regard to the previous character of his client, who, though somewhat rowdyish, had never been known to commit a vicious act; and to show a greater degree of ill feeling existed between the accuser and the accused than the accuser deemed. The prosecutor felt that the case was a clear one, and his opening speech was brief and formal. Lincoln arose, while a deathly silence pervaded the vast audience, and in a clear and moderate tone began his argument. Slowly and carefully he reviewed the testimony, pointing out the hitherto unobserved discrepancies in the statements of the principal witness. That which had seemed plain and plausible, he made to appear crooked as a serpent's path. The witness had stated that as the affair took place at a certain hour in the evening, and that, by the aid of the bri ghtly shining moon he saw the prisoner inflict the death blow with a sling shot. Mr. Lincoln showed that at the hour referred to, the moon had not yet appeared above the horizon, and consequently the whole tale was a fabrication.

An almost instantaneous change seemed to have been wrought in the minds of his auditors, and the verdict of "not guilty" was at the end of every tongue. But the advocate was not content with this intellectual achievement. His whole being had for months been bound up in this work of gratitude and mercy, and, as the lava of the overcharged crater bursts from its imprisonment, so great thoughts and burning words leaped forth from the soul of the eloquent Lincoln. He drew a picture of the parjurer so horrid and ghastly that the accuser could sit under it no longer, but reeled and staggered from the court room, whilst the audience fancied they could see the brand upon his brow. Then in words of thrilling pathos Lincoln appealed to the jurors as fathers of sons who might become fatherless, and as husbands of wives who might be widowed, to yield to no previous impressions, no ill founded prejudice, but to do his client justice; and as he alluded to the debt of gratitude which he owed the boy's sire, tears were seen to fall from many eyes unused to weep. It was near night when he concluded by saying that if justice was done—as he believed it would be—before the sun should set it would shine upon his client a free man. The jury retired, and the court adjourned for the day. Half an hour had not elapsed, when, as the officers of the court and the volunteer attorney sat at the tea-table of their hotel, a messenger announced that the jury had returned to their seats. All repaired immediately to the court house, and whilst the prisoner was being brought from the jail, the court room was filled to overflowing with citizens of the town. When the prisoner and his mother entered, silence reigned as completely as though the house were empty. The foreman of the jury, in answer to the usual inquiry from the court, delivered the verdict of "Not Guilty." The widow dropped into the arms of her son, who lifted her up and told her to look upon him as before, free and innocent. Then, with the words, "Where is Mr. Lincoln?" he rushed across the room and grasped the hand of his deliver, whilst his heart was too full for utterance. Lincoln turned his eyes toward the west, where the sun still lingered in view, and then, turning to the youth, said: "It is not yet sundown, and you are free." I confess that my cheeks were not wholly unwet by tears, and I turned from the affecting scene. As I cast a glance behind, I saw Abraham Lincoln obeying the divine injunction, by comforting the widowed and the fatherless.

PREDICTED SUPREMACY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.—The seventy-first anniversary of the Royal Literary Fund was recently held in London, about one hundred gentlemen present, and the Lord Bishop of St. David's presiding. In his speech to the toast of the evening, the Chairman said, to illustration of the remark that our language had not lost either in compass or force through the hands which now used it, that "a few years ago, in the Royal Academy of Berlin, a most illustrious German philologer regarded it as his deliberate opinion that the language of Shakespeare was destined to become universal, and bear away, like the English race itself, to distant parts of the globe; that its copiousness, its compactness, and its good sense fitted it for that purpose in a higher degree than any other living tongue, that of his own German fatherland not excepted."

OBITUARY.

Departed this life at Jenner's Cross Roads, Somerset county, Penn'a, on Saturday morning, the 25th of April, 1860, Mrs. Annie H., wife of Mr. George H. Lovode, of Rockport, Westmoreland county, in the 39th year of her age, which threw a pall of grief over a household where the sunshine of life daily predominate, and the fellowship of home is affectionate and sacred.

"Leaves have their time to fall,
And flowers to wither at the Northwinds breath,
And stars to set—but all,
Thou hast all seasons for thine own, O Death!

Youth and the opening rose
May look like things too glorious for decay,
And smile at thee—but thou art not of those
That wait the ripen'd bloom to seize their prey."

It becomes our melancholy task to record the death of our young, loved, amiable friend, who, but eight short months before, beckoned, stood before the altar, when she wore a gar
