How Ladies Should Dress.—We find in "All the Year Round" the following views expressed in regard to ladies' dress:—

As you look from your windows, in Paris, observe the first fifty women who pass; forty have noses depressed in the middle, a small quantity of dark hair, and a swarthy complexion, but they what a toilet! Not only suitable for the season, but the age and complexion of the wearer. How beat the feet and hands! How well the clothes are put on, and more than all, how well they suit each other!

Before English women can dress perfectly, they must have the taste of the French, especially in color. One reason why we see colors ill-arranged in England is, that the different articles are purchased each for its own imagined virtues, and without any thought of what is to be worn with it. Women, while shopping, buy what passes the eye on the counter, forgetting what they have at home. That parasol is pretty, but it will kill, by its color, one dress in the buyer's wardrobe, and be insuitable for the others. To be magnificently dressed costs money; but, to be dressed with taste, is not expensive. It requires good taste, knowledge, and refinement. Never buy an article unless it is suitable to your age, habit, style, and the rest of your wardrobe. Nothing is more vulgar than to wear costly dresses with a common delaine, or cheap lace with expensive brocades.

What colors, it may be asked, go best together? Green with violet; cold with dark crimson or lilac; pale blue with scarlet; pink with black or white; and gray with scarlet or pink. White looks generally requires a warm tint to give it life to it. Gray and pale blue, for instance, do not combine well, both being cold colors. White and black are safe wear, but the latter is not favorable to dark or pale complexions. Black is, to some skins, the most becoming; not however, if there is much color in the cheeks and lips, and if there be even a suspicion of red in either hair or complexion. Peach color is perhaps one of the most elegant colors worn. Mauve is very becoming, particularly to persons with dark hair and eyes. But whatever the colors or materials of the entire dress, the details are all in all; the lace around the bosom and sleeves, the flowers in fact, all that furnishes the dress. The ornaments in the head must harmonize with the dress. If trimmed with black lace, some of the same should be worn in the hair, and the flowers which are worn in the hair should decorate the dress.

A Scotch Answer.—The Rev. Ralph Erskine, on a certain occasion, paid a visit to his venerable brother Ebenezer.

"Oh, man," said the latter, "but you come in a gude time. I have a diel of examination to-day, and ye maun tak' it, as I have matters of importance to settle at Perth."

"Aye, will he got a wife," instantly cried the anvil hammerers; "but can you tell me how long he stood after?"

"Sit down Walter," said the discomfited divine.

Dimples.—Dimples are the perpetual smiles of caricature—the very cunningest device and jurkingstake of love. When the earth is dimpled by dells and valleys, it always seems to laugh; when the ocean is dimpled by a light breeze, it sparkles with joy beneath the sunshine of heaven. We cannot look for frowns on a dimpled face—frowns and dimples will not associate to gether. How soft, how roguish, how beautiful are the dimples in the elbows and shoulders, and the pretty hands and feet of the rosy babe. Mothers dote upon those darling dimples, and delight to kiss them. But perfectly enchanting dimples, at least to the eyes of an enthusiastic young man, are those which come peeping out of the cheeks and around the mouth of "sweet seventeen," when sweet seventeen essays some arch provoking sally, peeping out and flying away the moment after, coming and going with the most bewildering coquetry.
