Work for the Month.

The Wheat grower will now of course use all dispatch to have his ground put in readiness for the seed. The preparation of the fallow will be pushed forward until the whole is well broken. The longer it can lie, after breaking, the better; but if by reason of drought or other hinderance it be not yet done, the proper time of seeding is not of course to be deferred, but the sod must be well packed by harrowing and and rolling. Early seeding is of much importance upon every consideration but one, that we can but advise it strenuously. Sown in this latitude before the 5th of October, it is liable to the ravages of the fall fly. This is a serious evil and may be a fatal one. On the other hand, we run the risk from late sowing, first of a light crop from an inadequate supply of roots; second, the winter killing; third, spring fly and joint worm, for want of a vigorous growth fourth, weevill or midge, fifth, rust. May we compromise upon a time which will steer us between Scylla on the one hand and Charybdis on the other? We are willing to admit that on well prepared clover fallow it is safe to sow after the 5th to the 15th of October.

PREPARATION OF SEED.—The due preparation of seed Wheat should not be neglected.—The most ready way is perhaps as efficient as any, viz: to wash effectually by slowly pouring the Wheat into a strong brine, which floats the smut ball, light grains, &c. These are carefully skimmed off and the Wheat drained in baskets, which may be dried with lime, plaister, or ashes. If allowed to soak some hours, as many prefer, there is considerable increase of bulk by absorption, which must be observed and allowed for in seeding.

LIME AND FARM MANURE.—Get and apply lime when you can. It is very well for the Wheat crop to put on even a few bushels to the acre, and especially well for the clover and grasses which may succeed it. A dressing of twenty-five to fifty bushels may be put on as convenience suggests; the smaller quantity to be repeated in a few years. Farm manures are always good for wheat, but should be used as a top-dressing after seeding unless well rotted, when it may be put in with the seed, or, with the surface working, before seeding.

PLANTING.—Make your preparation for planting at every convenient time by thoroughly digging borders and other grounds intended for the purpose. The most thorough preparation is by digging and trenching to the depth of two feet. Ordinarily, however, it will be found sufficient to plough and subsoil well.—Thorough draining is absolutely necessary, when the ground does not readily drain itself naturally.

FERTILIZERS.—We should use, when any fertilizer is required, some Peruvian guano—fifty to a hundred pounds, as the case may require. Beyond this, if your land requires it, use either more Peruvian, or phosphatic guanoes, or superphosphate, as your own or the judgment of your discret neighbors may determine from past experience in your neighborhood.

GATHERING FRUIT.—Continue to gather all Fruit as it ripens. Pears are fit to gather as soon as the stem will part readily from the wood by moving gently upwards and should then be gathered and matured upon shelves. Gather no fruit when wet with dew or rain.

PUTTING IN SEED.—For doing the work well and for economy of seed and manures, the Drill is almost essential to the Wheat grower. There are few who farm to any extent who are now willing to dispense with it.

SEEDS.—Gather Seeds of all sorts as they ripen. Let them be well matured and dried, and when best out put them up securely and label them.

RYE.—Rye should be sown at once—the earlier the better. It is not a favorite crop where wheat can be grown to advantage; it is useful, however, for late fall and early spring feed when sown early, as well as for the grain.

TIMOTHY.—Sow Timothy seed any time this month and to the middle of October.

CURING COWS.—A correspondent at Richmond sends us the following:

"I wish you would say to your readers, that calomel, in one ounce doses, will cure a cow of almost any disease. As I suppose all are ignorant of this experiment: I have two fine, valuable cows; they have had, it seems to me, some of the worst diseases that prevail—black tongue, murrain, dry murrain, &c.—and when I saw they were dying, I mixed one ounce of calomel in dry corn meal, which they would lick up, and it has never failed to cure."

Yours, truly. G. S. P.

A FATAL ACCIDENT IN THE ALPS.—On Wednesday, the fifteenth of August last, three English travelers, viz., Mr. J. M. Rochester and Mr. F. Vavasseur, both of Cardiff, and Mr. B. Fuller, of London, left Montavert, near Chammony, at five o'clock in the morning, with the intention of crossing the Col du Geant for Cormayeure, attended by three guides, of whom Frederic Tairraz, the brother of the well known Jean Tairraz, who keeps the Hotel de Mont Blanc at Aosta, was the chief; a porter carrying their knapsacks. The weather seemed favorable. Some time, however, before they reached the summit a thick fog came on, accompanied by a storm of hail and rain.

The travelers were extremely fatigued by the long ascent, rendered more difficult by a recent fall of snow, into which they sank up to their knees. This, and the state of the weather, caused the guides to urge them to turn back. They, however, refused to comply with this advice, alleging that they were too tired to return, and preferred proceeding. At about four o'clock in the afternoon they reached the summit. The travelers had been tied together by a new rope, of sufficient strength, at intervals of ten feet; two guides held the ends of the rope twisted round their hands, one preceding the party, the other following, while Tairraz walked with the travelers, grasping the rope from time to time. In this manner they descended for a considerable distance without any accident, the guides continually urging the travelers to plant their heels firmly in the snow, and to walk as steadily as they were able.—About 6 o'clock they reached a place where it is necessary to traverse a steep projecting ridge by a muddy and slippery path, the descent of which was, however, gradual. This path was then covered by fresh and sloppy snow to the depth of about a foot. The tired travelers were advancing on this path with very unsteady steps, when all at once, at the very angle of the ridge, one of them slipped, fell, and dragged with him his two companions, with the three guides, over a steep and long slope of snow. The guides at the ends of the rope made every effort in their power to arrest their progress but in vain; and seeing that they were all upon the point of being launched over the precipice, they let go the rope, forced their heels and feet into the snow, and stopped themselves as by a miracle at the verge of an abyss into which their unfortunate companions were immediately plunged. They made their way to the foot of the precipice, where they found three bodies in such a nad state as to leave no doubt of the fate of the fourth, and then hastened down to Cormayear, where they arrived soon after eight o'clock.
