PITTSBURGH:

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 22.

The Horrors of the Papal Prisons.

The Florence Nazione, presents us with the summary of a little work, entitled the "Prisons of Pallano." It is the record of the experience of several political prisoners, written in the Pontifical dungeons of Pallano. These tombs of the living are now, thanks to recent events, empty. One prisoner writes:

In the fort of Pallano there are about two hundred political prisoners, dressed like the criminals condemned to the galleys, and, like them, shaved. They are divided into five sections. Those condemned for life are shut up in cells, about nine spans wide, and about sixteen long, including the little table of brickwork. Other cells, about three spans wider, contain three prisoners; and others, not much larger, have seventeen all huddled together. In the first of these there is a small grating over and opposite the door, through which the food is introduced. The other cells have one window, and sometimes two, with an opening of about four spans in breadth and one in height, and through this the prisoners are fired upon like as necessary to keep them quiet. The food and hospital arrangements were villainous. The patients are neglected and ill treated. The medical attendants will hardly ever send a patient to the hospital, and when they do send him they always keep him on strict diet.

Perhaps they have a secret understanding with those who contract for the food. One day, when some complaints were made on account of the bad soup in the hospital, the person who made the complaint was taken by two keepers, and by dint of blows and kicks, was forcibly thrust along into the darkest dungeon, and there detained many days by order of the governor. When some prisoner at the point of death refuses to receive a confessor, he is removed into a solitary cell, and there, after having heaped on him a thousand outrages, orders are given to one of the lowest turnkeys to kill him by suffocation. The fact is known from the confession of the turnkey himself, who, on one occasion, refused to be a party to this barbarity. The corpse is interred in the interior of the fort, and the governor is present at the funeral. Sometimes he gives a kick to the head of the corpse, and commits similar outrages.

The following is the testimony of another victim of Papal miracle:

"Whilst I was an inmate of this den of horrors, a wife with her little boy obtained permission to see her husband. It was ten years since the Papal government had torn her husband from her embrace; the boy had never known his father, for he was born after the arrest. Neither the prayers of the afflicted wife, nor the tears of the tender child, nor the sobbings and despair of the unhappy father, could induce the governor to allow them to enter into one embrace—to let them mingle their tears together. It would be impossible to describe the rigors and the tortures, always new and increasing, which have been invented to augment the sufferings of the prisoners after the last fatal attempt at flight. In order to prevent the political prisoners from holding the slightest communication with the outer world, recourse was even had to the very strange and absurd expedient of forbidding the physician (although an individual completely subservient to the government) from personally visiting the sick in prison. He was to treat them on report of a creature who but a short time before had been in the galleys, and was transferred thence to perform the office of an hospital attendant.

This liberated galley slave felt the pulse, made his diagnosis, drew his conclusions, and the physician meanwhile waited in the room of the governor for the report of the attendant, and according to the character of that report, prescribed remedies for the patients whom he had never seen. Representation on representation was necessary before the Papal government could be induced to abandon this singular mode of proceeding; and it was only after some time that the physician obtained permission to approach the bed of his patients; but even then, only in the company of the turnkeys, who were placed as spies over his movements. His words, and the very expression of pity which his countenance might betray. One of the patients, a certain M——, of Bologna, begged to see the governor, to implore in the name of his companions, the permission to have the period for exercise extended for half an hour. The only reply he received was an order that he should be put in chains weighing eighty pounds, and thrown into the tower. The tower, situated in the centre of the citadel, is the most horrible of prisons—damp, isolated, with an opening at the roof, leaving the prisoner exposed to all the inclemency of the weather.

Be it summer or winter, the inmate of the tower has no bed save the bare ground—no covering save his own apparel—no food save bread and water. When I left the fort to be conveyed as an exile across the frontier, a poor prisoner had just died in consequence of illness caused by the repetition of this punishment, from which more than one prisoner had died whom the governor, perhaps, wished to get out of the way. A certain P—— of Ascoli, on returning from the chapel to his own cell, happened when he reached the court yard of the Corvines, to salute a condemned prisoner belonging to another section, who was looking through the grating. For that offence the head jailor, after beating him, had the usual chains put on, and then sent him to the tower. It was in March, on an Easter Sunday. After three days he was found stretched out, almost frozen on the ground. Then he was removed to the hospital, and thanks to a strong constitution, after some time he recovered. Many amongst the political prisoners in consequence of the treatment they had received, from the moral and physical tortures endured, have become insane.

They howl in their prisons, sometimes mingling with the other victims, at other times alone, but without any difference of treatment. One of these wretched maniacs committed one day an insane act. The head jailer beat him so as to leave him almost lifeless on the ground. Young C—— who was in the same cell, indignant at the outrage, called out that they were murdering the man. Thereupon the jailor departed, but immediately returned with a band of turnkeys, who at once fell upon the youth, removed him to another prison, and there with sticks and ropes, mercilessly beat him. Another poor fellow, whose intellect was temporarily wandering, A. M——, having made some complaint about his food, was kicked and thrashed back to his old cell—there left without assistance, without the visit of the physician, and with the coarsest diet. He recovered from his mental illness, but now, owing to the length of the imprisonment, of the sufferings endured, and to the treatment to which he has been subjected, his health has suffered to such an extent that his friends have no hope of ever seeing him again on this side the grave.

Italian Freedom, under the rule of King Victor Emmanuel, is now a settled thing. The news by the Vanderbuilt is that on the 3d. inst., the Piedmontese army, under the command of King Victor Emmanuel, attacked the army of Francis Second on the other side of the Garigliano, and completely defeated it. Victor Emmanuel was to enter Naples on the 9th, and all that is left of Francis Second's forces has fallen back on Gaeta. Francis Second has now but 15,000 more than on the ground on which he stands to call his own, and even that will be his but a short time longer. As for any help he will look for it in vain, except a little to help him fly the country which he has so wickedly governed. His last hope—Russia, Austria, and Prussia, in conference at Warsaw—has deserted him, for as we learn by the Vanderbilt, a circular note on the Warsaw interview has been addressed by Count Rechberg to the representatives of Austria abroad, in which it is stated, that in the Conference non-intervention in the affairs of Italy was agreed upon and that, although anxious to support the principles of order and the balance of power in Europe, the three Northern Courts would do nothing which might provoke a war. And so with Russia, Austria, and Prussia folding their hands before all his troubles, and with the sympathy of England in favor of the progress of freedom in Italy, so plainly and nobly expressed to Lord John Russel's despatch to the English Minister at Turin, naught remains for Francis Second but to rid Sicily of his presence as quick as possible, and leave that Kingdom and all Southern Italy to the freedom which now certainly awaits it. We may soon expect to hear that the Austrians have marched out of Verona and abandoned Venice.

All parties had a merry time of it in Baltimore, New York, a few evenings since. The Democracy had provided themselves with an abundant outfit for "Salt. River," and, under the general direction of the hard workers of the party, formed in line, and were escorted by the Wide Awakes towards their favorite bourne. It was a very funny affair; and all parties were jolly.

A Scedy fusion politician of Washington county, New York, got action Henry's cheek for $1,000 to defeat Lincoln in his neighborhood, and on the way home thought to make a personal speculation by betting the money on Pennsylvania. The $1,000 was pretty much lost. Washington county gives Lincoln 2,700 majority.

The Real Instigators of Disunion.—The very worst enemies of the North are those Northern journals who are continually misrepresenting Northern sentiment, and abusing Northern people. They never make a statement which is not either directly or indirectly a libel upon a great and powerful body of Northern voters, composing a majority of its most intelligent, calm-thinking, and conservative citizens. These false and malicious statements are eagerly copied by Southern Democratic journals, and read by Southern people, and thus they contract the prejudices and hostile feelings towards the North, which we find so general in that section. These Northern incendiary sheets are eternally warning the South of impending ruin in case of the success of the Republican party, and that its object is to wage a war of extermination against their right and institutions. The millions of respectable and law abiding men who constitute a party which is no more radical on the Slavery question than the old Whig party, and which elected Lincoln President who stands in the footsteps of the gallant old leader of that glorious old party, are invariably and constantly denounced as "Black Republicans," "Abolitionists," "Nigger stealers," "Negro Equality men" and so on; and thus the seeds of sectional animosity and civil discord are sown.

We have too good an opinion of the masses of the conservative people of the South, to suppose that if they correctly understood the policy and purposes of the Republican party, any serious cause of dissatisfaction would exist in consequence of the election of a Republican President; but not even a glimpse of the truth is allowed to reach them through these Democratic journals. They not only falsify and distort Northern opinions themselves, but will not contradict the grossest and most mischievous falsehoods on the part of their Southern contemporaries.—Cin. Gaz.

Mexico.—By the latest official advices from Mexico received in Washington we learn that the liberal Government have as yet received no authentic information of the capture of Guadalajara, somewhat detailed accounts of which we have received from other sources. The latest correspondence of the New Orleans Picayune also throws some doubt upon it. Miramon had left the Capital at the head of only two thousand men, one report, said in the direction of San Luis Potosi, and another in the direction of Guanajuato. It is apparently rather a difficult matter to keep track of him. An attempt made by one of his Generals to plunder the British Consulate at San Luis, where $400,000 of the money taken from the conducta by Gen. Degollado had been deposited, was prevented by Gen. Alvarez. We receive a confirmation of the report that a new diplomatic movement was on foot, in which the Prussian, British, Spanish and American Ministers would act in conjunction. The retirement of the British Minister from the Capital is known to be permanent, as a part of his legation came in the steamship Tennessee to New Orleans a few days ago.

Condition of the Illinois Banks.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Monday, Nov. 19—The Bank Commissioners have been in session several days, and have issued a call upon twenty-two banks of the State for additional security, it amounts varying from three to eight per cent. of their circulation, to be paid within thirty-five days. The deficit is less than $300,000. No prisoners after the last fatal attempt at flight. In order to prevent the political prisoners from holding the slightest communication with the outer world, recourse was even had to the very strange and absurd expedient of forbidding the physician (although an individual completely subservient to the government) from personally visiting the sick in prison. He was to treat them on report of a creature who but a short time before had been in the galleys, and was transferred thence to perform the office of an hospital attendant.

This liberated galley slave felt the pulse, made his diagnosis, drew his conclusions, and the physician meanwhile waited in the room of the governor for the report of the attendant, and according to the character of that report, prescribed remedies for the patients whom he had never seen. Representation on representation was necessary before the Papal government could be induced to abandon this singular mode of proceeding; and it was only after some time that the physician obtained permission to approach the bed of his patients; but even then, only in the company of the turnkeys, who were placed as spies over his movements. His words, and the very expression of pity which his countenance might betray. One of the patients, a certain M——, of Bologna, begged to see the governor, to implore in the name of his companions, the permission to have the period for exercise extended for half an hour. The only reply he received was an order that he should be put in chains weighing eighty pounds, and thrown
