ELECTROPATHY

PROFESSOR A. S. GREGORY and J. GOUCHER, M. D., have associated themselves together in the practice of their profession, thus uniting Electropathy and Hydropathy with a MEDICAL DEPARTMENT. They have their establishment supplied with a new set of ELECTRIC BATHS, which are superior to any now in use. The water used is of an invigorating temperature, and the electric currents are so regulated, that the patients, in receiving the benefits of these remedial agents, experience no unpleasant sensation. This system of treatment is among the safest, most effectual and least objectionable; it equalizes the circulation, soothes nervous irritations, and restores a healthy balance to diseased functions. The medicine prescribed will be compounded and put up at their office, under the immediate care of DR. GOUCHER, who has had twenty years experience in this business.

The following are some of the diseases that yield to their Treatment:

Palsy or Paralysis, Incipient Consumption, Rheumatism, both Acute and Chronic; Neuralgia, Headache, Torpid Liver, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, Weakness and Curvature of the Spine, Scrofula, Dyspepsia, Diabetes by Paralysis, Ringing in the Ears, Amaurosis, Cataracts, Weak Eyes, Erysipelas, Spasmodic Retention of the Urine, St. Vitus' Dance, Chollc, Salt Rheum, Prolapsus Uteri or Pile, Female Weakness and Irregularities, General Debility, Derangements of the Nervous System, Stiff Joints, all Diseases of the Bowels, Fever and Ague and Fever and Sores, Invariably Cured without the Knife.

In addition to their office business, they purpose attending to a GENERAL PRACTICE. All calls in the city and vicinity receive prompt attention. Letters containing stamp for postage will be attended to immediately, and if treatment is required, SIX DOLLARS must be sent for, for which they will send medicine to any part of the United States.

Quack Nostrums.

THE NEW YORK DAY BOOK says: "The majority of Hair Washes, Hair Dyes, Hair Tonics, Hair Oils, and the numberless preparations which are now before the public, under such extravagant, hyperbolical and fantastic titles as we see paraded in show bills, door cards, and newspaper headlines, as half preparations, are all humbugs of the first water, their real merit, when they possess any, is that they are no harm. HOGG'S ARCTIC WILLOW OIL, LARD OIL, SWEET OIL, rendered and uncured, make up, when in beautiful wrappers and white flint glass bottles, the comliest cluster of toning and when thus costly, are baptised with some trisyllable term, and caught at by verdant young and old of both sexes! Such is not the character of Professor Wood's Hair Restorative. This gentleman comes before the world without any "high falutin". Xilophokonion, or any other astounding and startling catchpenny terms; he simply advertises a Hair Restorative—what it expresses precisely—and as a Restorative it acts. Buy Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, and you value your scalp, eye, your very brains, apply nothing else; for it may be that you will get some worse substance than perfumed lard oil on your cranium. Remember, Wood's Restorative for the Hair is the best article extant."

It Will, by Nature's own Process, Restore Gray Hair to the Original Color, Will make Hair Grow on Bald Heads, Will restore the Natural Secretions, Will restore it as soon as itching, Will remove all Dandruff, Will cure all eruptions—arrest Scald Head, Will make the Hair soft and Glossy, Will make the old appear young again, Will preserve the Color of Hair to Old Age, Will always Fasten it and stop its Falling, And is one of the best Toilet Articles for the Hair now in use.

Manufactured by O. J. WOOD & CO., and sold Wholesale and Retail, at 444 Broadway, New York, and 114 Market st., St. Louis, Mo.

Sold in Pittsburgh by Dr. GEO. H. KEYSER, R. U. PAHNESTOCK & CO., and all Druggists. [mr24:1y]

SATURDAY MORNING, DEC. 1.

RENOVATION OF WORN OUT LANDS.—OLD LANDS vs. NEW.—We think it could be very satisfactorily demonstrated, even to the most sceptical, that a greater profit, and consequently a more substantial advantage, can be derived by the farmer from the renovation of what are commonly regarded as worn out lands in the older States of the Union, than by undertaking to bring under the plow the wild but infinitely more fertile lands of the Western Territories. We have treated of this subject before, but not in the phase in which we now desire to present the matter to our readers. We start with the proposition that every soil that was originally fertile is capable of being improved by returning to it those elements, which, in the course of frequent cropping, have been taken from it. If the surface soil is alone exhausted, it frequently happens that the subsoil abounds in those constituents which constitute the principal food of plants. But whether this be the case to any extent or not, it is certain, that under the improved system of husbandry which all good farmers are now adopting, whatever the soil requires, can be restored to it at a cost which will justify the outlay, not only in the immediate increase of the crops grown upon it, but also in the marked edition which is thus made to the value of the land. It is upon this latter point that we desire particularly to dwell. We hold—and the experience of others will bear us out in the assertion, that the annually increasing value of lands, in the older and more populous States of the Union, will fund a larger yearly interest to the energetic and economical farmer than he can possibly derive from lands, however rich, which are in places remote from a market and but thinly settled. Every body knows, also, that, apart from the rupture of old social ties, and the absence of schools, and the scarcity of places of worship, in territories but newly settled, the people who go there have to contend with the difficulties consequent upon bad roads, and with that most serious of all drawbacks, a deficiency of laboring hands. It is of little consequence to a man that land is cheap and productive, if he has not within his own family, or cannot hire force enough to till it. The first cost too of clearing, fencing, building, and of breaking up the tough prairie sod, or the matted roots of lands recalimed from the forest, involves a much larger expenditure than most persons are apt to imagine. If timber is scarce, and it is so to a remarkable degree over the larger portion of the territory now open to settlement, the labor of "toting" what is required from long distances, apart from the charges that are incurred in hauling it, must also be taken into consideration. So likewise must be the time spent in going to mill, or to the nearest town or village or county store for such supplies as the family may need, from time to time, and which they will certainly need during the first year of settlement, when, pending the growth of the crops everything has to be bought, and if bought on a credit has to be paid for out of the crops which are of themselves insufficient at the outset, to meet much more than the ordinary wants of the household during the ensuing season. We do not say that there are not cases in which men will do better in the west, than if they remain where they now are. But such cases are in reality very few, and are wholly dependent upon conditions that are exceptions to the rule. A poor but industrious man, with a grown up family of sons and daughters, willing to work and able to furnish among themselves the labor necessary to open up new lands, will, as a rule, succeed where others more delicately nurtured, or less favorably situated, would fail to receive any corresponding advantage for the sacrifices they have felt themselves impelled to make. In a majority of instances it will be found cheaper, pleasanter, and ultimately more profitable, to expend the same means, and the same amount of labor, in improving those soils which they themselves have by unskilful cultivation partially exhausted, or such as they may purchase from others who have brought them to that condition. Let us look at the facts. Abundance of land, of the character we have described, can be bought in the older States for prices ranging from ten to twenty dollars an acre; many of them having upon them all the necessary buildings and outbuildings, the latter frequently being actually worth more than the entire cost of the land. If the fencing is not good, there is usually wood enough on the place which can be used for that purpose; or it can be bought in the vicinity at a low price. There is no heavy cost incurred for clearing, for the fields have long been subjected to the plow. They have been cultivated under the "skinning process," and have consequently been exhausted of their organic and inorganic constituents, quite as much from slovenly tillage as from constant cropping. It frequently happens on such farms, that the plow has never penetrated the soil to a greater depth than about four inches. All below that is hard pan. The true farm, then, does not lie on the surface, for that will yield little or nothing; but below the surface, where there is yet a soil as virgin for agricultural purposes, though probably not quite so rich in its elementary substances as the unrilled soils of the Western territories. Four inches, then below the surface, lies the farm which is to be brought under cultivation. It is easily done. It only requires a pair of stout horses and a plow to correspond. If another pair of horses or oxen can follow in the same furrow with a subsoil plow, the results will be still more speedily apparent, and the returns for the labor expended much more ample. The whole secret of good crops, wherever there are fertilizing elements yet remaining in the soil, consists in thorough tillage. Spade husbandry would be the best of all if it were not the cost of labor would exceed the increase in the value of the crop. Deep plowing, and a complete pulverization of the whole soil to the depth that the plowing extends—no mere smoothing of the surface will answer—affords not only a genial bed through which the roots of the growing plants may ramble freely, but by being in a condition to be acted upon by the influence of the sun, and the frost, and the air, and the rain, yield more readily to the wants of the plants their soluble constituents.

But except in rare instances it will not do for the farmer to depend upon the rough tillage alone. He must get his farm into the best condition possible in the shortest space of time, so as to realize the interest upon his outlay, and to enchance the more rapidly the value of his land. How is this to be done? By turning his attention, in a spare days, to the collection of materials for the fermentation of compost heaps, and to the general increase of his stock of manures. Where these are still insufficient to meet his requirements, he must make up the difference with portable fertilizers, crushed bones, Peruvian, or manipulated guanic, ashes, &c. The application of these will prepare his land not only for the growth of a paying crop of any one of the cereals, but will also bring forward the clover that ought invariably to be seeded with them. If the clover takes well, a bushel of plaster scattered over each acre in the spring will cause it to start luxuriantly, and when the land is thus placed in a condition to bring a good crop of clover, by turning under the second growth, after it has well ripened, and then, and not till then, broadcasting over the surface a mod rate dose of lime, the process of renovation may be said to be complete. There is nothing in all this that calls for any large expenditure of capital; there is nothing, in fact, in it that does not lie within compass of the means of any energetic man, and, if he will pursue the course we have suggested, he will find that our so called worn out lands will yield him quite as liberal returns both as regards their agricultural products and their marketable value, as the choicest soils of the far West.—Rural Register.

PUNCH ON AMERICAN POLITENESS.—The last number of Punch received here is decidedly American. The opening article is about the Woman's Library in this city, and the closing one refers to an American lady who attended the ball given at Portland to the officers of the Prince of Wales squadron, and according to the report of a morning paper, "used her fan with all a woman's grace and power." Punch thinks that if the lady in question used the article with "all a woman's power," it simply broke the head think as it was, of some solid man there, who was blockhead enough to infringe American decorum in addressing one of the splendid women, by which inadvertence he got a crack on the crown with her fan, instead of a less serious rap on the knuckles.

The large picture in Punch is entitled "latest from America," and represents the Prince of Wales on his return home after his American tour. The royal youth has suffered a change during his absence. He has become Americanised, and now sits before the grate with his legs resting on the mantel piece, a cigar in his mouth and a pocket-pistol in his hand, while a box of fragrant Havanas is on a table near by. A sherry cobbler, with its characteristic straws, is on the mantel piece. The young prince wears a shocking bad hat, tipped over on one side; sports a goatee, and really looks quite like "one of the boys." In the back ground stands Prince Albert, gazing on his son with an expression of amazement, not unmingled with fear. His Royal Highness, Junior, patronisingly remarks to His Royal Highness, Senior, "Now, dr-e it, you'll liquor up, and smile down, I'll tell you all about my travels."

FOUR MISSING STEAMERS.—Discovery of Portions of the Wrecks.—No doubts now entertained respecting the melancholy fate of the four steamers which having been missing—namely, the Edinburg, iron screw steamer, 800 tons, belonging to Leith, outward bound to Cronstandt; the Moscow, also an iron screw steamer, 600 tons, of London, bound to the same port; the Viscount Lambton, steamer, belonging to Sunderland, and the Thor, from Copenhagen for Hull. It will be remembered they started on their voyage a day or two prior to the outbreak of the terrible storm which swept the North sea and Baltic on the 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th, when so many vessels were wrecked. With the exception of the Moscow, nothing has been heard of them from the period of their sailing, and from quantities of wreckage and cotton that has been met with in the North sea, it is inferred that the whole of the ships in question must have foundered during the fearful hurricane, and every soul belonging to them met with a watery grave. The Edinburg, which was a superior class iron ship, was rated in Loyd's Register, A 1, for 12 years. Her crew consisted of Capt. Steele, and twenty-seven officers and men. Like the Arctic
