Why should it be asked to make concessions to those it has overcome? It is not usual for victors to yield the fruits of victory to the conquered. No party ever triumphad in this country, before, that was asked to make concessions to its proponents, nor did ever any party in this country signalize its advent to power by voluntarily yielding all it had contended for, and asceptions the principles upon which it attained to power. It is needless to add that if the Republican party follows the course thus indicated, it would have been better for it had it never been born.

We counsel the Republicans both at Harrisburg and Washington, to beware how they triffee with the Republican seistiment of the country. If they stumble over it, they will fall; if it falls upon them, it will crush them.

Sullens.—The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphis North American, is fullganant at the Republicans, because they have no schemes to bring forward wherewith to struttly themselves and sacrifice their principles. Heigh him:
