TUESDAY MORNING, JAN. 15.

Crayon sketches.

From the January Crayon we select the following agreeable anecdote of artists:

GAINSBOROUGH.

The painter had a most feeling heart, and strong sympathy with misfortune. Thus, we find him, on being shown a letter from a fallen and forsaken woman, turning back on his way to the theater, to send the poor supplicant a five pound note.

Gainsborough was very successful at repartee. He was once examined as a witness on a trial respecting the originality of a picture, when a counsel endeavored to puzzle him by saying, "I observe you lay great stress on painter's eye—what do you mean by that expression?" "A painter's eye," answered Gainsborough, "is to him what a lawyer's tongue is to you."

Money and pictures were alike bestowed inconsiderately. Fulcher relates that he presented twenty drawings to one lady, who was so ignorant of their value that she pasted them on the wall of her dressing room; and gave Col. Hamilton the Boy at the stile for playing a solo on the violin.

FUSELI.

Although Fuseli's talents were highly appreciated in Italy, he never obtained a diploma, or other honor, from any academy; indeed, the refused all overtures made to him on the subject; for he considered the institution of academies to be "symptoms of art in distress."

In his temper Fuseli was irritable and violent, but appeased in an instant. In his person small, with a face of independent, unregulated fire; Leslie says his front face had very much the character of a lion. Haydon heard he was handsome when young, and with women (when gratified by their attention) no man could be more gentle.

Fuseli used to say: "I always think in the language in which I write, and it is a matter of indifference, to me whether it be in English, French, or Italian; I know each equally well; but if I wish to express myself with power, it must be in German. For the purpose of reading Sepp's Work on Insects, he gained late in life a competent knowledge of Dutch; indeed, he had a peculiar facility of acquiring languages. He told Mr. Knowles that, with his knowledge of general grammar, and with his memory, six weeks of hard study was sufficient time to acquire any language with which he was previously acquainted.

Calling one morning upon Mr. Johnson, Fuseli found him bargaining with an author for the copyright of a book. When the gentleman left, Mr. Johnson said, "That is Mr. Kett, and his work is to be called the 'Elements of Useful Knowledge.'" "In how many volumes?" said Fuseli. "In two octavos," was the answer. "No, no, Johnson," said he, "you cannot be serious; the ocean is not to be emptied with a teaspoon."

Discoursing with a lady upon sculpture, who was, however, too well read in the classics to be a subject of his mischievous pleasantry, he pretended to inform her of a fine bas-relief which had been received by the Royal Academy from Rome. "What is the subject?" she asked. "Hector and Andromache," said he, "dashing out against a wall the little Astyanax's brains." "Pooh! why do you tell me such stuff?" said she. "Say I you may laugh," replied Fuseli, "but it would go down with many a one. I have often said such things in company without detection."

The students were constantly amused with Fuseli's oddities. He heard a violent altercation in the studio one day, and enquired the cause. "It is only those fellows, the students, sir," said one of the porters. "Fellows!" exclaimed Fuseli; "if would have you to know, sir, those fellows may one day become monsidiums." The noise increased—he opened the door and burst in upon them, exclaiming, "You are a den of wild beasts." One of the offenders, Munro by name, bowed and said, "And Fuseli is our keeper." He retired smiling, and muttering, "The fellows are growing witty."

A student, as he passed, held up his drawing, and said confidently, "Here, sir, I finished it without using a crumb of bread." "All the worse for your drawing," replied Fuseli; "buy a twopenny loaf, and rub it out."

When Blake, a painter infinitely more wild in conception than Fuseli himself, showed him one of his strange productions, he said, "Now some one has told you this is very fine." "Yes," said Blake, "the Virgin Mary appeared to me, and told me it was very fine; but can you say to that?" "Say?" exclaimed Fuseli, "why nothing—only her ladyship has not an immaculate taste."

Naval Intelligence.

The government is quietly removing cannon from farm's way in the South. The schooner Hero*ine* has just arrived here with some formidable 68 pound guns, taken from Richmond, Va., where they were lying for some time in rather a tempting manner. There is a gun factory at Richmond.

Rifle rath rumor as the very atmosphere is, we think the following as material to excite, surpasses them all. It is given as a naval officer, now at the national capital, wrote it:

"The New York papers have taken great pains to prove that, although the Macedonian and Brooklyn, men-of-war, draw too much water to cross the bar at Charleston, they are not meant to go there, notwithstanding their speedy equipment. The Fabius, Powhatan and St. Louis now under orders to return from the Gulf of Mexico to a certain Northern port, also require more than thirteen feet of the briny element to float them. But there are other places which they can enter—where their presence may be required. New York is not forgotten here, I can tell you, nor Mr. Schell's hint about the painted bars; nor a boast of Mayor Wood's, that the old iron clad Roanoke could be mustered by Wood & Co., to garrison it. The Potomac, too, has once floated the Washington line-of-battleship, and a steam gun-boat or two might still be got in. If you think the matter things are not contemplated you wrong James the First."

It is understood that the United States steam frigate Niagara, as soon as her services are no longer required by our Ministers, will return to the United States, unless Commodore Stribling deems her duration in the East necessary. She was in good condition at last advices.

One of the California steamers will soon take out to the Pacific squadron some new machinery for the U. S. steam gun-boat Nargansett. It is preparing rapidly for her, under the superintendence of Mr. Kentish, at the Brooklyn yard.

The statement that the Fulton had sailed to see the Star of the West safe into Charleston harbor is entirely incorrect. The Fulton is now at the Brooklyn navy yard, and could not be put in order for sea in 30 days.

A gun-boat is lying in Philadelphia, which might be put in commission at once.

The Sentiment in Europe.

The hope of a speedy recognition of the proposed Southern Confederacy, as an independent nationality, by any of the foreign powers, grows more and more hopeless as we receive later files of European journals. The Aftonblad, the leading newspaper of Sweden, and the organ of the liberal party of that kingdom, and the Pegligt Allehanda, the mouth-piece of the Swedish conservatives, both contain leading articles on American affairs in the tone of those already republished from the English and French press. The former journal considers the attitude assumed by the rebellious secessionists of the South as "final desperate struggle of a retrograde organization, as opposed to the progress of political reform, and as antagonistic to the spirit of the age as any similar party in the monarchies of Europe." It seems pretty evident that Sweden, whose monarch, Gustavus III., was the first sovereign, after Louis XVI, who formally recognized our independence, will not be the first to welcome a stultifying Confederacy to a place among the nations. The Fædreland of Copenhagen, which bitterly attacked our Government during the discussion relative to the Round Lues, speaks in forms equally strong of the Southern movements. Still more forcible are the expressions of opinion in the Morgenblad and other papers of Christiania, whose editors, through the Norwegian emigration to this country and the intercourse in that language which are published in the West, are much better informed concerning political affairs on this side of the ocean. They declare that Kepopp, which has already seen hundreds of thousands of its most industrious classes leave its shores, has an interest in the unity of the American Government beyond any commercial or financial considerations. For a Northern Republic with the boundless unoccupied lands beyond the Mississippi under its control, and freed from any connection with the system of slavery so repugnant to Europeans, would soon induce an emigration compared to which all previous emigration would seem insignificant.—Tribune.

A Victim of Southern Fanaticism.

Mr. Peter Ryckman, a coachmaker, who formerly resided in New York, but who removed about a year ago to Wilmington, N. C., to work as a journeyman at his trade, called at our office yesterday, and related the following circumstances: A short time since, being thrown out of employment by the great stagnation of business, he went to Williamsburg, Va., in the hope of obtaining work there. A few days after his arrival, while in a bar-room, he was asked whether he considered slaves property, to which query he replied, that they were lawfully held to labor or service, but he did not consider them property in the same sense as mules or inanimate objects. This remark gave great offence to his audience. He was arrested, and confined in jail for two days, after which he was released, and taken before a sort of semi-official tribunal. Many threats were made that he would be tarred and feathered, etc., but it was finally decided that he should be sent to the North, after an application to the side of his face and temples of some powerful preparation, which caused considerable pain, and left heavy marks, which are still visible, not only of sores, but of some original application, which is of a black color. The tool-chest of Mr. Ryckman, and his clothing, he was obliged to leave behind, in his hurried and enforced departure.—Phila. Press, Jan. 11.

SPALDING'S PREPARED GLUE

Spalding's Prepared Glue!

Spalding's Prepared Glue!

SAVE THE PIECES!

ECONOMY IS THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.

As accidents will happen, even in well-regulated families, it is very desirable to have some cheap and convenient way for repairing Furniture, Toys, Crockery, etc.

Spalding's Prepared Glue

meets all such emergencies, and no household can afford to be without it. It is always ready, and up to the sticking point. There is no longer a necessity for limping chairs, splintered veneers, headless dolls, and broken cradles. It is just the article for scrap, sheet, and other ornamental work, so popular with ladies of refinement and taste.

This admirable preparation is used cold, being chemically held in solution, and possessing all the valuable qualities of the best cabinet-makers' Glue. It may be used in the place of ordinary mucilage, being vastly more adhesive.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Thirly generally understood to be the best purgative that can be made, these Pills are still further improved, as to sugar-coating, so as to be pleasant to take, and certain not to waste their virtues on the stomach, but to reach the bowels in full power to do their work of cure. Every dose is active with healing medicine, and no one who needs a cathartic will be willingly without it. Their penetrating power stimulates the vital energies, and thus they cure by the same means that all good medicines do—by arousing the system's own curative forces. Their sugar coating preserves them perfectly in all climates, and renders them pleasant to take, and safe to keep for any length of time. Hence they are the best physic for the traveler, the emigrant, the soldier, the sailor, the fisherman, the housekeeper, the merchant, the miner, the invalid, and for the whole family. Prepared by

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

Miscellaneous.

THE ONLY DISCOVERY

WORTHY OF ANY CONFIDENCE FOR RESTORING

The Bald and Gray.

Many, since the Great Discovery of Prof. WOOD, have attempted not only to imitate his Restorative, but profess to have discovered something that would produce results identical; but they have all come and gone, being carried away by the wonderful results of Prof. Wood's preparation, and have been forced to leave the field to its meritious sway. Read the following:

BATH, Maine, April 19th, 1859.

PROF. O. J. WOOD & Co: Sirs—The letter I wrote you in 1856, concerning your valuable Hair Restorative, and which you have published in the vicinity and elsewhere, has given rise to numerous inquiries touching the facts in the case. The inquiries are: first, is it a fact of my individual and name, as stated in the communication, record, is it true of all there contained; third, does my hair still continues to be in good order and of natural color? To all I can and do answer invariably, yes. My hair is even better than in any stage of my life for forty years past, more soft, thrifty and better colored; the same is true of my whiskers, and the only cause why it is not generally true, is that the subscriber is wasted off by frequent ablution of the face, when if care were used by wiping to-face in close connection with the whiskers, the same result will follow as the hair. I have been in the receipt of a great number of letters from all parts of New England, asking me if my hair still continues to be good, as there is so much fraud in the manufacture and sale of various compounds as well as this. It has, no doubt, been much imitated as it has been used not only without any good effect, but in absolute injury. I have not used any of your Restorative of any account for nine months, and yet my hair is as good as ever, and hundreds have examined it with surprise, as I am now 61 years old and not a gray hair to my head or on my face, and to prove this fact, I send you a lock of my hair taken off the past week. I received your favor of two quart bottles last summer, for which I am very grateful; I gave it to my friends and thereby induced them to try it; many were skeptical until after trial and then purchased and used it with satisfactory results. I will not say a favor, but you send me a test by which I can discover fraud in the Restorative, said by many, I fear, without authority from you. A person has
