PITTSBURGH:

WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEB. 13, 1861.

"RECONSTRUCTION."

In the resolutions of the Democratic State Committee, calling a State Convention on the 22d inst., there is a declaration that "the Union is dissolved and must be reconstructed on democratic principles."

The purpose is to reaffirm this declaration at the convention of the 22d, and make it the corner stone in the platform of the reorganized democratic party.

I say "reorganized," for the old democratic party is gone—broken up, never to exist again upon its former basis. Its new existence will date from the current month of this year of our Lord, 1861.

The expectation is that the new party will gather to it all the ultra conservative element in our party—the cotton element—the weak-kneed, weak-backed brethren who tremble at every threat of the South, and believe in purchasing peace at any price. Perhaps it will: and it is not impossible; it may not be improbable that there will be a reconstruction of parties—the "democratic" being the conservative (so called) and the "Republican" the progressive party. In the first struggle it is possible the "conservatives" may win; but even so, the "progressives" will be triumphant, in the long run.

Observe the coolness with which the dissolution of the Union is accepted as an accomplished fact. There is no waiting until the government, in Republican hands, has had time to measure its strength with the rebels and test the problem whether it has the power to maintain itself against a weak handed insurrection; but taking the first essay at Secession as unquestionably successful, and concluding that the government is, without doubt, overthrown, it declares that "the Union is dissolved!" No doubt the wish is father to the thought; and it must have afforded the Democratic State Committee a great deal of pleasure to record, prematurely, as a fact, a conclusion so welcome to them.

Observe, further, the coolness with which they declare that "the government must be reconstructed," and reconstructed "on democratic principles." Now, we do not see any necessity for its reconstruction, at all, even admitting, for the sake of the argument, that the Union is really dissolved, much less do we admit any necessity for its reconstruction on democratic principles.

It does not follow by any means, that if the Union is actually dissolved, it must be reconstructed. If the government fails to bring back its revolted provinces; if it is too weak to assert its supremacy; if it has fallen so low that a half dozen of the Gulf States can successfully set it at defiance; the country will accept the fact, (when it is a fact, but not before,) as inevitable, but it will never seek to bring back the rebel States it was unable to conquer. We shall be strong enough to form an independent government of our own, without them and in spite of them.

But reconstruction, even if it should be deemed necessary, must not, of consequence, be upon "democratic" principles, as that term is understood by the men who use it. We prefer, as do, no doubt, a large majority of the people, to adhere to the principles of those who framed the Constitution. The anxiety of the democracy to throw off those principles is natural, but is too transparent to deceive.

"Reconstruction upon democratic principles" means reconstruction upon pro slavery principles. It means a concession to the Cotton States of all they demand. It means an abandonment of the determination of the Fathers, "not to admit into the Constitution any idea that there can be property in man," and the incorporation into that instrument of that "wild and guilty phantasy," "it means that slavery is to be constitutionally enthroned as the supreme power in the government; that slaveholders shall rule as of divine right; that the North shall be opened, as the free ingress of masters with their slaves resident for a time or in transitu; that every northern freeman shall become constitutionally a slave-catcher; that the territories shall be given up to slavery; that new territory shall be acquired for it; and that, if needs be, the foreign slave trade shall be legalized.

This is reconstruction upon "democratic" principles. This is the issue upon which the Democracy is to re-organize, and which will be tendered to us, at once. We must meet it, and it is best that we should familiarize ourselves with it now. Old issues are dead, or dying; this is the one living issue before us, upon which parties are to be formed, and upon which the people will be called to decide. All other issues sink into insignificance beside this new one; and we cannot doubt that when it is fairly made and resolutely met, the decision will be emphatically upon the side of freedom.

SOUTH CAROLINA.—The bold and patriotic Senator from Tennessee, the gallant Johnson, in the late speech alluded in no very flattering terms to the little rattlesnake kingdom which is now making such a rumpus in the neighborhood of Charleston. These remarks, coming from a Southern man and a slaveholder, it is to be hoped will not create the same feeling of horror on the part of our Northern aiders and comforters of treason, that they would if they emanated from a citizen of the North. It is become fashionable now for democratic politicians to meet every offer to enforce the laws and preserve the Constitution with a pitiful howl in behalf of "our Southern brethren." For these demagogues Mr. Johnson's speech possesses no attraction. In honest old fashioned devotion to the Union, however palatable it may be to the patriotic masses of this country, will only excite the ire of those who believe in the right of treason and rebellion. We quote from Senator Johnson's speech:

"He said that South Carolina early had a prejudice against a government by the people, and that secession was no new thing in that State. He referred to the early history of South Carolina, where the people of that State proclaimed at various times that they were ready to go back under the dominion of King George.

He read an address of the people of Charleston to King George, in 1780, saying that they never intended to dissolve that Union; lamenting the struggle for Independence, professing loyalty for the Government, the King, &c., &c. He then referred to the attempt to break up the Government in 1833, by South Carolina. Then they were restrained and their pride humiliated, and men who speak in their Convention now say they have had an intention to dissolve the Union for forty years. The question now is, are the other States going to allow themselves to be precipitated into ruin by South Carolina? What does South Carolina propose to give to Kentucky and Tennessee? All South Carolina wants of Kentucky and Tennessee, and the other States of the northern portion of the South, is to furnish men and money. When we find her commanding a contest for Mexico or elsewhere, Tennessee and Kentuckians will be very desirable to help in the battles. What protection can South Carolina give Tennessee and Kentucky, if her negro property needs protection? We have got the men, and we will have to pay for it, and not South Carolina, which has been the apple of discord in this Confederacy from my earliest recollection to this time, complaining of everything and satisfied with nothing."

BITTER-OUT OF PLACE.—We find in last Monday's Forney's Press, among the news selections, the following uncalled for fling at Massachusetts:

"It is stated that Lieut. Col. Harrison Ritchie, one of the aids of Governor Andrew, of Massachusetts, is in Washington on Wednesday, tendering General Scott to assure him that Massachusetts is ready to furnish volunteers, if required by the General Government. The Legislature of that State has appropriated $100,000 to equip and fit out any volunteers called for, showing more alacrity than was displayed during the Mexican war, and a great deal more than in the war of 1812, when her State authorities took ground against the country, and thus afforded 'aid and comfort' to England."

While we confess our inability to perceive the propriety of indulging, particularly at this time, and on this occasion, in disparaging remarks against a leading member of the confederacy, whose offence, after all, seems to have been a tender of its services in support of the laws to the regularly constituted authorities, we at the same time feel compelled to deny the truthfulness of the reminiscences which they contain. It is well known that in the Mexican war Massachusetts furnished a regiment of volunteers, and doubtless would have furnished more had their services been required by the government. Nor is it true that the "State authorities took ground against the country" in the war of 1812, although many of the people of that State probably did object to the manner in which that war was conducted, in their section of the country. Some people imagine that the only way to conciliate the South is to depreciate the courage and patriotism of the Northern States, and we presume we must accept this thrust at the old Bay State, unkind and untruthful as it is, as one of the many "offerings" by which the Union is to be saved.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10, 1861.

Until the Border Slave States can agree among themselves, so as to be able to assert authoritatively to the representatives of the Northern States that they are not only for the Union, but that they are for the constitution and the enforcement of the laws against all violators thereof, whether of individuals or States, and cease their cry against coercion at every attempt made to enforce the laws, thereby denying the right of a State to secede, they can never propose any plan of settlement that the North will accept. The Border Slave States declare, by their delegates in the Convention, and by their Senators and Representatives in Congress, that they want a settlement, that the Union must be preserved, but at the same time they refuse to settle upon any terms that do not admit the right of a State to secede, by denying the right of the Administration to carry out the government within the borders of such State, wherever the federal law is violated.

I am satisfied that the Border States will have to yield this point first, before the North will consent to any arrangement. Northern men of all parties, and some of the ablest men in the South, agree that when it is conceded that a State can go out of the Union at pleasure, without the consent of the other States, it is admitting that we have no government. Rather than yield this point, the North will submit to all conditions and compromises, and go about the more important work of ascertaining whether we have a government, and whether it is worth preserving, and if so, to preserve it at all hazards and whatever cost. This is about the point at which we have arrived.

A large number of delegates in the Peace Congress are in favor of a national Convention; and many of the ablest men in Washington from different parts of the country, who are mere "lookers on in Vienna," favor the project. Should the proposition now before the Committee of the Convention fail, that body will undoubtedly report back upon a national Convention, the recommendation to be in the form of a resolution suggesting to the Legislatures of the different States the propriety of asking Congress to take preparatory steps for calling such a Convention.

In view of this suggestion, the Western delegations are already preparing the way to have the election of delegates put far enough off to obtain the basis of the census of 1860.

Commissioners from all sections have become confident that peace measures will be proposed before the election of the question is reached in Congress on the Compromise report of the Committee of Thirty-three.

Mr. Corwin, it is understood, will accept the Peace Conference propositions in preference to his own. When the measure is proposed, debate will be cut off, and a vote at once had.

The Massachusetts delegation in the peace commission is filled by the arrival of Judge Allen. Governor Andrew has officially appointed Samuel O. Upham, Esq., messenger of ex Governor Banks and of the present Governor, to act in the capacity of Commissary to the commission."

The Commission appointed by the Peace Conference will probably make their report on Tues ay next. Various plans are before them. From what has privately transpired, the border States consolidate, meet with much favor, and it is the general impression that the Conference will adopt some such measures of compromise, including the division of the Territories by the line of 36 deg. 30 minutes. North of it slavery to be prohibited, and South of the line neither Congressional nor Territorial interference with the subject, which is to be left for the determination of the people when they form their State governments. The acquisition of future territory is not to be so easily consummated as heretofore.—N. Y. Herald.

As the District Attorney here openly sympathizes with the secession movement, the general opinion is that Government should employ additional counsel to aid in prosecuting Mr. Floyd and his confederates connected with the great robbery of the Interior Department. Legal steps have already been taken by these parties to avail themselves of every technical exception. When Mr. Russell was before the Committee, he refused to answer whether he had made any payments or presents to persons situated in the War Department, in connection with his contracts, or for other purposes. Suspicion points clearly to several who were largely paid for their official favors. Mr. Bailey protested in all his statements to Mr. Russell and others, that he never realized any benefit from the abstracted bonds. Yet his account with Messrs. Riggs & Co. shows that during the months when he was operating with Mr. Russell, his deposits rose to three or four times the aggregate of his whole year's salary. He had been known in Wall street as the negotiator of Florida bonds for Mr. Yulee and other secessionists, and of the Chickasaw bonds issued by Mr. Toucy, and which Congress has refused to legalize.

About $140,000 of the Indian funds were invested in Florida bonds, but Mr. Bailey knew their value too well to touch them. In fact, several batches of South Carolina bonds were tried on the market, and withdrawn, because purchasers could not be found.

The bonds were abstracted at various times, commencing with $150,000. The design was to extend the time of disclosure till the 4th of March, but this was accidentally frustrated by Auditor Fuller, who refused to pass an account for coupons which was not properly vouched in consequence of the abstraction, and must have led to an exposure had not Mr. Bailey preferred the confession. That retreat precipitated the discovery.

It is clearly established that at the very time Mr. Floyd was issuing millions of dollars of acceptances for Messrs. Russell, Majors & Waddell, they were actually receiving, while Congress was in session, the battles, Loss of Appetite, and General Debility.

Notice for Kansas.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Will you allow me to ask the following question through your paper?

Why have our Representatives in Harrisburg been so slow to follow the good example of the Republicans of New York, who have endeavored to have an appropriation of $100,000 made by that State for the relief of Kansas? The vindictive and spiteful hatred of the Democratic faction has prevailed for the hour to intercept the generous and beneficent act contemplated there; but that faction will not long have the base, demoniac triumph which they are shameless enough to glory in. The humanity of New York will vindicate itself nobly before many days; we confidently believe, and thousand of perishing families will be rescued, and live to bless the "Empire State."

Now, Pennsylvania can "come to the rescue," in this hour of need, as well as New York. One prompt act of patriotism her Legislature have within a few days past done, which you have noticed with warm approval in the Gazette yesterday. Why not go on to add to this another act of patriotism and generous humanity, which will be interpreted now and ever more to mean that the Keystone State recognizes and performs her duty to the whole country and every part of it—that she holds not her proud place in the glorious Arch in vain, but of right, and because she will bear a full share of the burdens of the commonwealth, and understands that love which, in all relations human and divine, is the "bond of perfectness!"

Let us hope that ere another week passes, Pennsylvania will have done her part toward her youngest sister State, and by such an appropriation as she can well afford, add one hundred thousand dollars to the fund for the preservation of Kansas. About three cents a head of an assessment on the inhabitants of Pennsylvania will be all the cost of this noble and ever-blessed act of timely beneficence.

New Dental Partnership.

DRS. STEBBINS & MUNSON,

having formed a partnership and opened an office at

No. 105 Fifth street,

WOULD tell the attention of the Public in their superior facilities for the manufacture and insertion of all kinds of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and for the performance of all other branches of DENTISTRY.

Without resorting to publicity of any one style, they still recommend the VULCANITE PLATE TEETH as the most Healthy, Durable and Comfortable substitute for the Natural Teeth. They are guaranteed to be superior in every respect to the best Metallic Plate Teeth, whether mounted on gold or any of the lower metals, and can be furnished at a cost considerably less.

Those having imperfectly fitting Gold Sets, can have them replaced with the VULCANITE, at a small additional expense above the value of the Old Plate.

TEETH EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN,

BY THE USE OF AN APPARATUS WHEREBY NO DRUGS OR GALVANIC BATTERY ARE USED.

Cold weather is the time when the apparatus can be used to its best advantage.

Medical gentlemen and their families had their teeth extracted by my process, and are ready to testify as to the painless as well as the safety of the operation—whatever has been said by persons interested in asserting the contrary, as having no knowledge of my process.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH inserted in every style.

E. OUDRY, Dentist.
