PITTSBURGH:

TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 26, 1861

D. F. WILLIAMS, ESQ.,

For some years past one of the editors and proprietors of the Gazette, returns to-day to York, Pa., from whence he came to this city. Not without regret, do we see so esteemed a friend, and one with whom we have associated so long, take his departure. As a companion and an associate many a pleasant reminiscence and an agreeable note in their own disordered imaginations. As in some forms of insanity, they see fiends in friends, enemies in brethren, danger in security. Fidelity to the government, the Constitution and the Union is put into the same category with abolitionism, and the man who refuses to be a traitor is set down—"spotted," as the phrase down there is—as an enemy of the South, a coward, a craven, a subsidist—

Now among a people so fierce, so hot-blooded, so little accustomed to cool reflection, and who pride themselves above everything else upon their spirit, their "chivalry," as they delight to call it, such impressions as we have just alluded to, once lodged in the general heart of the community, are well calculated to lead to acts of desperation and madness, outrage and treason. The North has so far looked on as men look at a maniac cutting his own flesh and tearing his own clothes. While the paroxism is at its height they let him alone, hoping that exhaustion will soon supervene, and that some degree of rationality will return when the mad fit shall have run its course.

Among the seceded States Florida is the weakest by far, and we have accounts that the people there already bitterly bewail their folly, and would gladly return to the Union if they could. But they are territorially cut off by South Carolina and Georgia, and must wait their movements. In Georgia and Alabama the sadness is only partial, and the same is probably true of all the seceded States but South Carolina; and even there a little glimmering of reason may still exist, although kept down by terror and inexorable intolerance. In Texas the Houston party is likely to gain the ascendency over the party of the Southern Confederation; but whether the triumph of that party would keep that State in the Federal Union we cannot tell.

"The course of the Secessionists (says the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer) has been very similar to that of the French Jacobins. They have been guided solely by a desire to gratify their own interests. They have utterly ignored the wishes of the people, and when these have attempted to remonstrate, they have been imperatively silenced. When some of the Northern Alabamians refused to endorse their views, they were told by Mr. Yancey that they would be coerced. Their fear of the opinion of the people has been wonderful, and proves how illiberal foundation the secession movement possesses. The Louisiana Legislature requested that the Constitution of the new Confederacy should be submitted to the vote of the people. The Convention decided not to submit it. In Alabama the same game will probably be played. In Texas the Secessionists are pursuing the same tyrannical course, and a conflict between them and the Unionists seems probable. Daily evidences are given of the fact, that there is a large body of Union men throughout the South which is only awaiting an opportunity for expressing its sentiments. It has been so completely overshadowed by the Secessionists that they have not dared to stir. By the Secessionists an expression in favor of the Union is regarded as but a form for sanctioning Abolitionism. That those Union men have been thus trampled upon is the fault of Mr. Buchanan. Had he only done his duty, the conservative element would soon have overpowered the ultra one, and our country would have been protected from the evil which is now suffers."

Iron Railroad Cars.

The New York Tribune, of Friday, gives an account of a railroad accident which took place on Wednesday night on the New York & Erie Railroad, which furnishes a most striking illustration of the superior safety of iron cars as compared with those constructed of wood. The New York and Hackensack train, consisting of an engine, tender, and a very long iron car, in which were about twenty passengers, dashed through an open draw-bridge, and plunged into the Hackensack river. The danger was not discovered till the bridge was reached, when it was too late to stop the train. The locomotive fell in 27 feet of water, and the car passed over it, striking against the opposite abutment, crushing in the forward end, and falling into the river. Owing to the length of the car, the rear end did not go down, but lodged against the railroad track. To add to the perils, a vessel about to pass the draw, drove her bowsprit into the car, where it broke short off. The car was not much injured, and, singular to relate, not a passenger was seriously hurt. Had this car been of wood it would have been splintered into a thousand fragments, and the lives of all in it, in all probability, would have been sacrificed. One great cause of disaster to life and limb by collision, in ordinary cars, in addition to the splintering of wood, is the liability of the seats to be wrenched from their fastenings. In this instance, being bolted to the iron floor, not one of them gave way. This practical proof of the greater safety of iron cars ought not to be lost upon railroad managers. The disaster is attributable to the negligence of the engineer of the train, who did not observe the red signal of danger which was conspicuously displayed. Had the company ordained that all trains should stop, or run very slow, on approaching a draw bridge, this accident would not have happened.

Iron cars are coming rapidly into favor and use; and no part of the country is better prepared to go largely into their construction than this. A good beginning has been made by Messrs. Morris, Hanna & Co., whose establishment at New Brighton, in Beaver county, is turning out passenger, baggage and freight cars of the most approved construction.

WHAT FEAR THE PEOPLE.

Certainly if you hear no other fair interpretation, this refusal of the Southern politicians to submit the Montgomery Constitution to the popular vote. If it were in Virginia now, where their co-conspirators have been laboring so hard to make the very world "submissionist" odious, they might make objections, and argue plausibly against what they don't like, with at least one strong verbal reason at hand and ready to do service. But where these politicians are, they meet no such people as the "submissionists" of Virginia; hence it is clear they have concluded that every kind of submission is bad, and ought to be opposed by high-minded, honorable men like themselves. Submission to the North—hang the traitor that would even name that! Submission to the will of the majority—that's as bad—it means submit to Black Republicans!—hang the villain that says a word of it! Submission to the people—that's—that's—some kind of submission, too,—and our Southern aristo-democrat's—as all kinds of submission wheel-ever, and, sotto voce, the people, too. A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from New Orleans, says:

"The question of submitting the Montgomery Constitution to the people is still agitated; but the Revolutionists continue to oppose it violently. 'It is a step,' says the Crescent, 'toward a Government of Radical Democracy and Red Republicanism.' O, no; no Radical Democracy for us! Are we not the governing class? Permit the people to vote on their organic law? Why, we might as well have a Government of shopkeepers and mechanics and small farmers at once! The Delta states its objections with still more frankness. Hear it:

"The objections to such a submission in the present condition of affairs are very obvious. There exists in these States a party of reaction, which seeks to defeat and obstruct the new organization, not on account of any defects in the plan, any objectionable features in the Constitution, but from hostility to the whole movement, and a preference for a foreign Government. This party being defeated on the question of independence, hopes now to triumph by a coalition with those who would reject the new Constitution, because of some feature they may not approve."

In plain English, the Constitution must not be submitted to the people, for fear there should be a majority against it at the polls. This at least has the merit of directness, and coolness, inside a government professing to be Republican. Wherever you have thought of the Republican idea hitherto, their effrontery has now risen to a sublime height, which cannot fail to excite your mingled wonder and admiration."

PRESIDENT JEFFERSON DAVIS has reached a white house at Montgomery. It ought to have been a black house; but as it is, it is a poor imitation of that around which cluster so many grand and sacred associations. They might as well attempt to get up another George Washington as another White House.

"There is but one White House on earth," says the North American: "That White House has been the centre of democratic liberty, and of man having learned to look up to it as the summit of political ambition. But from the would be "white house" at Montgomery the very name of liberty is banished as a condemned and proscribed thing. Their government represents nothing, and means nothing but the mere attempt at power. It is American republicanism stripped of all the sublime precepts upon which it was based by the fathers of the Union, and surrounded with a Venetian secrecy and terror to prevent its acts being known or understood. The business of the Congress is all done in secret session, and no act or resolution is allowed to be known until finally issued in an official manner."

Pittsburgh Postmaster.

ROBERT P. VON BONHORST, Esq., long a resident and active business man in this community, has been appointed by the President to the important office of Postmaster of this city. This appointment will meet the cordial approbation of many in this community. It was made at the earnest solicitation of a large number of those whose business correspondence makes them the heaviest contributors to the revenue of the office. Without any invidious reflections upon the merits and claims of other gentlemen, we may be permitted to say that the appointment is a good one.
