PITTSBURGH: SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 6.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, April 5, 1861.

The city has been rife with rumors all day concerning a reported collision at Fort Pickens. No official intelligence has reached here, and no information of any sort relating to it is in possession of the President or Cabinet.

The messenger who bore the order to land the troops from the Brooklyn at Fort Pickens went by sea, and has not yet been heard from. The impression obtains in official circles that he started for Key West, from which place the last advices of his presence come, before he arrived at Pensacola. That, however, is merely a speculative opinion, and may be erroneous.

The Cabinet were in session four hours this morning upon Fort Sumter, without reaching a positive result. Gen. Scott was before them. They determined for the first time upon a regular Cabinet meeting, which will be held at 12 o'clock daily and Friday of every week at noon.—N. Y. Times.

A special session of the cabinet was held to-day at 11 o'clock, when a large batch of dispatches were received and laid before the meeting by Private Secretary Nicolay, who testified that the crowd of officer seekers in double quick time.

A great deal of interest and no little excitement has been manifested regarding the meeting, and it is known to have been held to consider the long continued question of the evacuation of Fort Sumter. The frequent intimations that the cabinet had never come to any determination and the question, and that there was a probability that reinforcements would yet be sent, have served to create much speculation. It is quite apparent, however, as fast as the truth can be got at that although there is a difference of opinion among the members on the question, yet this idea does not prevail to such an extent, but that the fair inference is that the fort will yet be evacuated. The South Carolinians are very impatient about the matter, and telegrams are flying here thick and fast from Charleston, desiring to know what the administration intend to do.

The statement that the order to send every available man-of-war in readiness for immediate service was issued with a view to a hostile demonstration against Spain, is utterly unfounded. The purpose of the naval movements is no more or less than the collection of the revenue from cash on board. My information to this effect is positive and direct. The order was not formally issued from the Navy Department until this morning. It was transmitted by telegraph to the different naval stations.

A change has evidently come over the spirit of our rulers. A decidedly warlike breeze has been blowing from the White House for the last twenty-four hours. Unmistakable symptoms are visible on all sides that some decisive action bearing upon the Southern question is about being taken by the Administration. A Cabinet officer avowed to-day to a friend that a storm was coming.

The Cabinet meetings yesterday and to-day are known to have been almost exclusively devoted to the consideration of Southern affairs. Military movements and preparations are going on in every direction. In fact, it is but too plain that the passive attitude of the administration during the last four weeks was but a stroke of political cunning, and taken and preserved only with a view to the spring elections and the new loan. The former now being over, and the latter negotiated, the time intentions of the Executive in regard to the practical part of the dilemma are about being revealed.—N. Y. Herald.

The news received here this morning of the advance of three thousand Mexicans upon Brownsville, Texas, created quite a sensation in the White House circle and on the streets. It has been corroborated by several dispatches, but is still discredited by officials here. Each enterprise on the part of the Mexican Government seems too romantic and incredible for truth. Some account for it by the desire of Juarez that Stevenson shall fail and our Government be restained, and that such a blow as Gen. Ampudia proposes to strike would prove vexatious to the extreme to Davis and the Texas Secessionists; also by the fear on the part of the Mexicans that the Confederate States will attempt to acquire Mexico, if they establish their independence.—N. Y. Times.

The city has been experiencing to-day, among the officials, a little excitement, caused by the report that a great riot had taken place in Virginia, and that a mail agent had been mobbed and tarred and feathered. The railroad officers and the postoffice department were thronged with people anxious to know the truth of the matter. But it appeared to be simply a Washington sensation, without the least foundation in fact.

If the mail is interfered with by any indignation to the mail agent, both will be promptly removed from the road.—N. Y. World.

In order to advance disunion in Virginia, a majority of the proprietors of the Richmond Whig have determined to change its policy, and advocate Secession, substantially in opposition to the conservative course which Mr. Ridgeway has heretofore contemporarily pursued. Having voted down and out, a new paper will be immediately started under his auspices, intended to assert the same principles even more defiantly than before. Several counties in Western Virginia still declare they will not submit to Secession, if the conspirators should succeed in pushing it through.

Mr. Blaisdell, the constructor of the Custom House at Galveston, Texas, arrived here to-day, bringing with him nine thousand dollars of government funds, handed him by the collector of that port, which the secessionists failed to get hold
