CHEERING.

When Mr. Lincoln asked the people at Trenton if they would stand by him in case he should find it necessary to plant his foot firmly, the full-hearted response of the multitude was, "We will! We will." It is now certain, that they spoke the sentiments of nearly all the American people north of Mason and Dixon's line, and of thousands south of that line.

While the President and his Cabinet were engaged in making their arrangements, and quietly ascertaining the true condition of things, and before any steps had been taken indicative of a firm and decided policy, the spirit of secession became rampant and exultant, while at the same time the hearts of patriots sunk in despondency and gloom.

It was a severe trial to be kept three or four weeks in a state of uncertainty, with apparent inactivity and indecision on the part of the government, while they knew that treason was extremely active and making rapid advances. From one extremity of the country to the other the press gave utterance to the popular discontent. But all this had a good effect; for nothing could have given the administration stronger assurance of the support of the nation than these emphatic condemnations of supposed indecision on the part of the government—utterances which over-rode all party considerations and attachments. On the other hand, from the depth of depression to which it had been sunk the patriotism of the people sprung up with a corresponding bound, when they at length saw that their government was moving wisely and firmly in vindication of its dignity, authority and rights.

This great question rises above mere party considerations, as was shown by the severe strictures of the Republican press upon what was believed to be indecision and hesitation on the part of the President; and equally as by the manly and patriotic tone of some of the Democratic journals in support of the Administration, now that it has grappled in stern conflict with treason. The Post of this city, in its last two issues, is all that a true American citizen could wish it to be; and as it is now the leading paper of that party in Pennsylvania—since the traitorous Pennsylvanian died for want of support—we trust that its wholesome tone will be echoed by the press of that party throughout the State. Let the Democratic press of the North stand by the government in its struggle with Secession, and it will so discourage the traitors who are warring against it, that they will give up in despair; for be assured that when they began this mad enterprise they calculated upon the support of the Democracy of the North.

PARTIES IN VIRGINIA.

The politics of this venerable Commonwealth are in a fearful condition. One faction, embracing the most violent, hot-headed and reckless of the population, are Secessionists of the maddest school. Another is made up of a kind of middle men, who profess to be for the Union, but only on such terms as none but madmen or cowards would think of granting—men who profess to be in favor of the Federal Government, while they would deprive it of both the right and the power of self-preservation—men who acknowledge the right of secession, but would rather not practice it just now. The third is made up of true Union men, without conditions degrading to the free States, or at war with the fundamental principles of the Constitution—men who would rather rend their State than secede from the Union. These last are chiefly found west of the Blue Ridge, a section which contains a majority of the white population of the State.

It is plainly to be seen that the middle party will be quickly absorbed. They must either become secessionists or unconditional Union men; and judging from the mighty wave of loyalty that is now rolling over the country, carrying with it and uniting all parties in the free States, we feel strong hope that a majority of the people of Virginia will, in the hour of trial, stand true to the Union.

The secessionists were exulting last week at the new turn things had taken at Washington. They thought that what they call coercion would drive the middle party into their ranks; but the aloud rising in the North looks more threatening to traitors than they expected, and consternation is taking the place of passion, pride and bravado. When Pennsylvania and Ohio take up arms of their own accord, and unite as one man in support of the government, they feel that they have gone about far enough.

THE VIRGINIA CONVENTION.

In the Virginia State Convention on Tuesday, the discussion on the resolutions was continued. An amendment stating that the Federal authorities have no power to deal with the subject of secession in any way, was voted down—114 to 12. A resolution was adopted—120 to 30—declaring that the convention was willing that the seceded States should be recognized as independent Powers. An amendment declaring "that in the event of proposed amendments to the Constitution being rejected by the Non Slaveholding States, Virginia will secede," was voted down—57 to 83. Private advices that Fort Sumter is to be reinforced produced a sensation in and outside the Convention. The proposition to send a committee to Washington to demand of the President an expose of his policy, led to a very interesting and important debate in the Convention. The project was warmly opposed on various grounds—but the most important incident of the debate was a declaration by Mr. Jackson, an influential Delegate from Western Virginia, that he and his constituents would secede from the State, if the State seceded from the Union, on the pretext of coercion applied to the seceded States.

Virginia, up to a recent period, has been the leading State of the Union, so far as influencing the Government was concerned. She has given direction to the general current of our politics, has influenced the legislation and public policy of the country, to a greater degree than any other State. There can be no doubt that she still holds this commanding position towards the Slaveholding States. She has thus far resisted the attempt to coerce or surprise her into political subserviency to the Gulf States—and do we believe it likely that she will ever consent to assume that position. But upon her course, in some degree, depends that of Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, and all the other Slaveholding States which are yet loyal to the Union.

But if Mr. Jackson is right, as we have no doubt that he is, as to what Western Virginia will do, if the Eastern Secessionists succeed in their projects, Virginia then can be quoted on both sides of the question, and will not influence, much less determine, the action of the above-named States after all. Other "electors affinities" than those supposed to exist in reference to Virginia, may then be freely, and, as length to the grief surprise of all, unequivocally developed.

In reference to Mr. Jackson's declaration in the Convention, an eye-witness says—"Had a pistol shot exploded in the Convention, it could hardly have created more consternation!"

A GENTLEMAN of Illinois, a most decided Democrat, writing to a friend in this city, says:

"I look upon civil war as almost inevitable; but as the South has forced the crisis upon us, let us meet it as becomes men of nerve and energy."

The Detroit Tribune tells a story for the authenticity of which it vouches: Twenty-four years ago a woman in St. Louis had her infant boy stolen from its cradle. A young man, to whom she had frequently told her story, on meeting further west, married a lady with an old trapper whom he supposed sought by the abducted child. After long and severe suffering he got at the secret; the trapper not long ago gave up his son to his natural mother by bestowing the child. The mother was sought for, and had just been found in Buffalo, N. Y.

FROM HARRISBURG.

[Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

HARRISBURG, April 10, 1861.

Ed. Gazette:—The Governor sent in a War Message, yesterday, urging the Legislature to Appropriate $500,000 towards the more effectual arming of the State. This extraordinary zeal, just now, is somewhat surprising. At the opening of the session, when the moral effect of such a movement, upon the South, would have been excellent, every obstacle was thrown in its way by those who are now so clamorous for it. They were all conservative, then; and what reason exists for arming, now, that was not as good, three months ago?

The Republicans of the two Houses held a caucus in the evening, upon the subject. They appeared to be unanimous, nearly, in the belief of the necessity of arming the State; but the subject of adopting the Corwin amendment to the Constitution was introduced, and led to a long and warm debate. There was no unanimity of sentiment upon that; and after considerable wrangling, the caucus adjourned without having arrived at any conclusion whatever.

Special Committees were appointed in both Houses on the Governor's message. The Senate Committee consists of Messrs. McClure, Penney, Hall, Schindel and Nichols.

The following bills passed the Senate:

Senate bill to incorporate the Allegheny Valley Hotel Co.

Senate bill relative to prison discipline.

Senate bill to facilitate the collection of debts due the Commonwealth.

House bill relative to the Erie Canal Co.

Mr. Keller called up House bill relative to the National Road; he succeeded in getting in a new section, conferring upon the Governor the right to appoint a Superintendent of the road; but, an amendment to the effect that the State should adopt the old debts of the road to the amount of $8000 was voted down, and all the rest of the bill was struck out. The bill then passed.

The House took up the private calendar and passed to second reading the following bills. They will pass finally to-morrow:

An Act authorising the commissioners of Cambria county to borrow money.

An Act to empower the commissioners of Washington county to compromise with the holders of the county bonds, and for the more effectual and economical mode of collecting taxes in said county.

An Act to authorize the appointment of a notary public in Erie county.

An Act to repeal the act relating to auctioneers in the city of Erie, approved the 30th day of April, 1855.

An A ct supplementary to an act incorporating the town of Lawrenceville into a borough, approved the 13th day of February, A. D. 1834.

An Act vacating part of Strawberry lane, in the reserve tract opposite Pittsburgh.

Supplement to an act to authorize the appointment of an auctioneer in Johnstown, Cambria county.

A further supplement to an act incorporating the University of Kittanning, approved the 18th day of March, A. D. 1858.

An Act to authorize the Erie canal company to perfect a certain contract.

A supplement to an act directing the manner of serving writs of summons in certain cases in the county of Mercer, approved the 10th day of April, A. D. 1849.

An Act relative to the borough of Franklin.

An Act for the preservation of fish in Middle Fork of Ten Mile creek, in the county of Washington.

An Act to establish a public ferry over the Allegheny river, near the mouth of Oil creek, in Venango county.

An Act relative to a public road in Pine Grove township, Warren county.

An Act relative to plank roads in Crawford county.

An Act to lay out a State road in Venango, Butler and Armstrong counties.

Supplement to an act incorporating the city of Erie.

An Act to incorporate the Beaver Coal and Navigation Company.

An Act to incorporate the Lucesco Oil Company.

A further supplement to an act incorporating the Pittsburgh Gas Company.

An Act to incorporate the Ohio and Mississippi steam Packet Company.

An Act to incorporate the Union Mutual Insurance Company of Westmoreland.

A further supplement to an act to incorporate Mount Union Cemetery, in Allegheny county, approved the 14th of April, 1846.

CHARLESTON ON THE 9TH.

On the evening and night of Tuesday, the 9th, Charleston city must have presented a very warlike aspect. Some military historian of the future will no doubt fill a page or two with vivid scene-painting and graphic details of that night, when first the alarm of real war was sounded in the "great and glorious revolution," and Charleston was ready to "open the campaign," with another Concord and Bunker Hill of Freedom and Independence—which being interpreted mean, Niggerdom and Oligarchic Usurpation. Meantime, till the palmetto-pelican historian appears, we have only the telegraph, a rapid but merely ephemeral writer, to chronicle the prowess and glory of the chivalry of South Carolina. In addition to the telegraphic dispatches received yesterday, the following fragmentary jottings must be carefully recorded, for the use of the aforesaid historian:

South Carolinians are anxious to meet the enemy at the point of the bayonet, rather than stand off and exchange iron compliments. The latter is too old dilberian style of fighting to suit the impetuous nature of the most desperate set of men ever brought together in a band to hand conflict, which will be terrible.

No attempt is likely to be made upon the city. Officers acquainted with the calibre of Major Anderson's guns say the longest shot will fall short three-eighths of a mile.

Dr. Gibbes, Surgeon General, was ordered to prepare ambulances, and make every provision for the wounded; and in all departments were observable the admirable system and discipline with which the State is prepared for this exigency.

Midnight.—The community has been thrown into a furor of excitement by the discharge of seven guns from Citadel square, the signal for the assembling of all the reserves ten minutes afterwards.

Hundreds of men left their beds, hurrying to and fro towards their respective destinations. In the absence of sufficient armories, the corners of the streets, public squares and other convenient points formed places of meeting, and all night long the rattle of the drum and the steady tramp of the military and the gallop of the cavalry resounding through the city, betokened the close proximity of the long anticipated hostilities.

The Home Guard corps of old gentlemen, who occupy the position of military exempts, rode through the city, arousing the soldiers, and doing other duty required by the moment. Hundreds of the citizens were up all night.

A terrible thunder storm prevailed until late hour, but in no wise interfered with the ardor of the soldiers—merchants, lawyers, doctors, students of divinity, clerks, mechanics and laborers joining shoulder to shoulder for common defence.

Financial Matters in Virginia.

The crisis is costing Virginia more money than her citizens will be willing to pay. Her debt amounts already to nearly forty-one millions of dollars, and the outlays this winter consequent upon the sessions of the convention and the extra session of the Legislature, involving large appropriations for purposes of State defense, will add at least from two to three millions more to this amount. An ordnance department has been established here by the last Legislature, and by common consent the appointments made in connection with it are the most infamous that could have been conceived. Not one man of four appointed, under the law organizing this department, understands anything about ordnance. One of the lieutenants appointed was a storekeeper at some country cross road in Augusta county, while the clerk is a low itinerant vagabond who is more obnoxious to the community than any man in it, and who, in fact, could not sell the price of two dozen of hats at $4,333⅓ a hat. Such an outrage does the convention regard these appointments to be, that they contemplate, as I am informed, passing an ordnance instructing the Legislature to repeal this ordnance law. And this is but a trivial incident of the reckless and unscrupulous extravagance to which the prevailing crisis has given rise. Virginia is being sadly mulcted. She is more a victim of plunder and maladministration that has been the nation under democratic rule. All seems like wreck and chaos. There is no concern for the public interest, all seeking to plunder what they can in this terrible wreck of interests. In the appointments to office, every consideration of social or moral standing, or even of capacity, is disregarded. The only qualification would seem to be abject sycophancy and rascality. Virginia presents this moment a spectacle such as probably no other State does present. She is hastening to ruin and bankruptcy at railroad speed. In her appointments, she betrays those symptoms of madness, which Horace says precede destruction. She is lapsing into a state of moral and political degradation precisely in keeping with her bankrupt condition. Virginia will have enough of secession after a while.

Lord Palmerston on "the American Question."

Lord Palmerston having accepted the office of Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, had to resign his seat in Parliament for Tiverton, but was re-elected without opposition. In his speech to the electors he adverted to the crisis in America in the following terms:

"There is but one spot in the political horizon, the contemplation of which must inspire us with regret and uneasiness. I mean those convulsions which are now taking place among our cousins in North America, leading to a dissolution of the Union of the formerly United States. It is not for us to judge between the contending parties. It is not for us to say what ought to be; whether compromises ought to be made by which the Union may be maintained, or whether it is best for the happiness of the sections that they should separate and form respectively different associations and confederacies; but of this I am sure; every man who hears me, every British heart will feel that it is far rather with that whole people, in the ultimate result of this difference now fast prevailing, that results may be brought about by amicable adjustments, and that the world may be saved from the afflicting spectacle of seeing brothers arming against brothers, and parents against children, most of seeing that state of social happiness which has hitherto been the admiration of mankind, deformed by disputes and a country which had been the scene of peace and industry polluted by the effusion of blood."

TO BUSINESS MEN.—An excellent chance for reliable business men to secure a profitable manufacturing business, owing to its small capital in its establishment and prosecution.

The manufacture consists in the application of a peculiar composition or enamel to common red bricks, and a variety of other building material, ornamental architectural finishings, ceilings, tiles for floors and for roofing.

This enamel may be tinted of any color, from the purest white to the deepest black, with all the colors and shades between. It imparts to articles to which it is applied a hardness and durability almost incredible, and a beauty surpassing that of the rarest and most costly of the variegated marbles, and, unlike these, is impervious to moisture, and will never fade, stain or deteriorate, costing but a trifle in first cost or the price of ordinary marble.

It is also valuable for table and stand tops, mantel-pieces, escutcheons, and an endless variety of other articles of utilities. The process of applying the enamel is simple, while the articles enamaled will command a ready sale, affording large profits. Responsible parties may procure licenses for manufacturing under the patent for any city or prominent town in the United States, by applying to the subscriber. A small tariff on the articles manufactured will be required for the use of the invention. Circulars giving full particulars will be forwarded to all applicants.

The superior merit and beauty of this enameled building material to anything in use has the unqualified indorsements of many of the most eminent architects and scientific men of this and other cities. For particulars address

General Agents for Enameled Building Material,

Dr. DR. VON MOSCHZISKER, 155 Third st. Pittsburgh:

I am happy to inform you that my little daughter, who has been quite deaf for four years, has, under your skilful treatment, entirely recovered. I feel satisfied that her hearing would never have been restored by natural causes, but to your ability alone is she indebted for it, and I would most earnestly recommend all afflicted with Deafness to consult you at once.

Respectfully yours, JOHN M'CLOSKEY.

ALLEGHENY, April 8th, 1861.

DR. VON MOSCHZISKER—Dear Sir: It is but justice that my gratitude for the relief experienced from your skilful treatment should have expression. For some time past my hearing had been so bad that I despaired of ever regaining it, though the advice of a noted physician was strictly followed. I am therefore truly grateful to you, and very happy to say that the operation performed by you has resulted in the perfect restoration of my hearing.

Gratefully yours, ROBERT HUNTER.

We are personally acquainted with Mr. Hunter, and have perfect confidence in his statement. He is under our supervision, in the employ of C. A. P. I. & Co.

It is well known that many Star Candles that are really sperm in the moulds, are scraped and sold as "sperm." There is a disadvantage and a loss in this practice to both retailers and consumers, even if the Candles are bought at wholesale at 7 cents per lb. from the price of the sperm or article. Thus:

A box of "Stars" sperm weight, nothing 240 Candles, and is sold for 24 lbs. at 37½ cents.....$9 00
A box of Sperm as obtaining the same number of Candles, same size is sold for 24 lbs. ACTUAL WEIGHT, at 50 cents.....12 00

Difference in favor of buying by weight.....$3 00
