PITTSBURGH:

WEDNESDAY MORNING, APRIL 17, 1861.

VIRGINIA IS GOING.

Advices from Richmond indicate that Virginia will very soon be forced over the precipice of Secession. That once grand old Commonwealth, the birth place and life-long home of Washington, Jefferson, and many others of the illustrious fathers of the Republic, is now a trembling captive chained to the car of Slavery. Pride, passion and terror, in strange combination, are urging her on to ruin.

"What then dowe, do quickly," was the last command given by the Son of Man to the traitor Judas. Judas obeyed, and immediately went out. Every reader knows what followed. Judas loved money more than he loved his Master. Virginia loves Slavery better than she loves the Union. Judas got what he wanted, for the money was promptly paid; and Virginia may secure what she wants by following in his footsteps. But Judas very soon dashed the accursed thing from him in remorse and horror, and, by his own act, plunged into deep perdition, in a fruitless effort to escape from insufferable torture. What may be the result of Virginia's bad choice time will reveal.

Will Eastern Virginia be able to drag Western Virginia with her in her mad leap? It is possible she may; but we fondly hope that the people of that section will not suffer themselves to be ruined for sake of an institution in which they have but little interest, and which many of them abhor. If they go, they go in obedience to that fierce, impulsive, unreasoning violence, which has so long kept the greater part of the South under a reign of terror.

With the entire North united as one man, rich, populous, and now intensely warlike, and with the extreme South apparently united on the opposite side, both rapidly arming for a deadly and decisive conflict, the situation of the Border slave States is perilous in the extreme. Divided and distracted among themselves; with thousands of their people true to the Union and Constitution of their fathers, and warmly attached to their brethren of the North, if they suffer the violent men in their midst to drag them out, they will have to sustain the heaviest shock of battle, the declining effects of which no man can conceive. They will be crushed "as between the upper and the nether mill stone." Their only safety is to be true and loyal to the government of their country. The powerful States of the North can easily shield them, and if they remain true to the Union, they can carry the war down to the Southern shores of the Atlantic and to those of the Gulf of Mexico. But if they go out they may expect the men of the Union, who are now arming in hundreds of thousands, to march directly across their borders, there to crush under the iron heel of war their peace, their security, their institutions, their property and their lives. May they hope to preserve Slavery in the midst of such a conflict? Nay, verily; but, like the thirty pieces, it will be dashed to to the ground even by themselves, as the detested "price of blood." For their own sakes, more than for ours, we beg of them to pause before they take that fatal plunge, to which men with the spirit of fiends are goading them. The intelligent men among them must be aware of the terrible spirit that the cowardly attack upon a little non-resisting, almost starving, garrison has awakened in all the free States. No human power can repress it, nor can they stand before it; and if Virginia and the other border States go out, it will only add strength, intensity and bitterness to this feeling—this stern determination of the people to crush treason wherever it may show its head. With shouts of joy they would unite with their border brethren to bear aloft their country's flag; but let them dare to lay a hand upon that flag to desecrate it, or drag it down, and that moment they would be regarded as enemies and treated as such.

We feel deeply the terrible import of such language as this; yet we know that the condition of things now existing fully warrant its use. Patience, long-suffering and forbearance have been suddenly changed to irrepressible wrath in the great heart of the nation, and the blast of its war-trumpet gives no uncertain sound. The question is not now, what will the President do? for those cannon shots of the traitors at Charleston have raised a storm that Mr. Lincoln may be able to guide, but which he could no more repress than he could stop a hurricane. Your fidelity, men of the Border States, is the only thing short of Omnipotence, that can calm this fearful tempest. A comparatively slight pulling forth of power can deal with treason in the Gulf States; but if you join them, now that they have made actual war upon the government, your act will draw forth all the energy of the freest, strongest, richest, and most intelligent people on the globe—a people of vast numbers, boundless resources and irrepressible spirit. As you love your fire sides and your States, we beseech you not to bring the one to desolation, the other to both material and political ruin, and upon yourselves the execrations of mankind.

NORTHERN TRAITORS.

These gentry are becoming very scarce, but there are still a few, although nothing like as many in proportion as there were tories in the days of the Revolution; but what few there are have a hard time of it. The other day a fellow ventured to appear in the streets of Baltimore wearing a secession badge. The crowd immediately gave chase and ran him off.

In Cincinnati a retail dry goods dealer was giving utterance to his sympathy with Southern treason. A citizen rebuked him, but he persisted in it, when the gentleman stepped to a market stand, picked up an egg and by a well directed shot broke it on the fellow's temple, covering his grizzly locks and whiskers with the adhesive contents.

In Philadelphia there is a little secession paper published called the Palmetto Flag. On Saturday the indignant populace gathered in large numbers in front of the building in which it is printed, determined to make an end of it, and it was with difficulty that the Mayor restrained them from acts of violence. Another paper, suspected of secession proclivities, was only saved from a rough visit to its rooms by hanging out the stars and stripes from a window.

It is right, at a time like this, that the public clamour of treasonable sentiments should be sternly checked, but we hope that all good citizens will refrain from the infliction of bodily harm, or injury to property. Leave such arguments to the devotees of the patriarchal institutions, down towards the gulf, and to the enlightened citizens of Dahomey. We have not yet got high enough in the scale of civilization for that sort of thing.

FROM HARRISBURG.

[Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

HARRISBURG, April 15, 1861.

ED. GAZETTE: Both Houses agreed, to-day, to adjourn on the 18th, and both are now holding their sessions to-day. I cannot, therefore, undertake to keep the run of events, and write merely to say that the Governor to-day authorized Gen. Negley, at once to muster into the service of the State (and of the United States) all companies west of the mountains desiring to tender their services. All such companies in Western Pennsylvania are directed to report at once to General Negley and to rendezvous at Pittsburgh without delay. S.

At Danville, Va., on the 30th ult., Roger A. Pryor made a speech and raised a secession flag. The former was almost universally condemned for its violence, and the latter was blown down in a few minutes after it had been erected.

THE FIRST DEFEAT OF THE REBELS.

[From the New York Post.]

It is evident that General Scott has once more beaten the enemies of his country by mere force of his admirable strategical genius. To do so, he has, as was necessary, suffered not only traitors, but loyal men, to rest under a misapprehension.

Those who remember the impatience with which the American public watched his apparent inaction at one period of the Mexican war will not have forgotten the shout of admiration which went up from the people when it was at last discovered that the supposed inaction had been in reality the wisest and shrewdest action; and that by the most masterly display of military strategy he had outwitted the enemy, and obtained a splendid victory when nought but defeat and disaster stared our army in the face.

He who reads and compares carefully the despatches from Charleston, Montgomery and Washington in this morning's journals, cannot avoid the gratifying conclusion that that which looks at first blush like a disaster to the government, is in reality but the successful carrying out of an admirable plan of military operations. Before this the traitors see themselves caught in the toils. In fact it seems to have sickened the chief traitor, Davis, already, for Montgomery despatches relate that when the news from Charleston came, and the mob serenaded Davis and Walker, "THE FORMER WAS NOT WELL, AND DID NOT APPEAR;" and even his secretary was costive of words, and "declined to make a speech."

The facts which tend to the conclusion we have pointed out may be summed up as follows:

Gen. Scott has been averse to the attempt to reinforce Fort Sumter. He saw that it would cost men and vessels which the Government could not spare just now.

As an able general, he saw that Sumter and Charleston were points of no military importance, and would only need valuable men to hold, if we took them—with no adequate advantage gained.

He saw that the two keys of the position were Fort Pickens in the Gulf, and Washington the Capital.

He knew, what Davis had not generalship to perceive, that on the 4th of March and for some weeks afterwards it would have been almost impossible for the Federal Government to defend Washington against such a force as the traitors had already collected before Sumter, and which could be marched at any time on a Capital not yet prepared for defence—not yet even purged of traitors.

His plans, based on these facts, were at once laid. By every means in his power, he concentrated the attention of traitors and loyal men on Sumter. He must have seen with infinite satisfaction the daily increasing force gathered at Charleston, while the Government lost no time in strengthening the Capital. Every hour the traitors spent before Sumter gave them only more surely into the hands of their master.

To make assurance doubly sure, he PRETENDED to leave Fort Pickens in the lurch. It was said to be in no danger, when Scott knew that a formidable force was investing it. Man feared that all would be lost by the inaction of the Government, when it was never more shrewdly energetic.

At last Washington was reasonably safe. Forces were gathered. Once more our brave old General saw himself with means in his hands. Then came the armament popularly believed to be destined for Sumter. The government said not a word—only asked of the traitors an opportunity to send its own garrison a needed supply of food. They refused—and fearing the arrival of the federal fleet—drunk and besotted with treason, and impatient to shed the blood of loyal soldiers, they made the attack.

Scarce had they begun, when they saw, with evident terror, ships hovering about the harbor's mouth; they piled their cannon in desperate haste; but no ship came in to Anderson's help! What was the matter?

Made bold by the furious thirst for blood, they dared the ships to come in. But no ship offered its assistance to Anderson! More, the guns of Sumter were only directed at the works of the traitors, and Major Anderson evidently tried to fire in such manner as not to kill men. He did not even try a few bombs on the city, though it is certain, from a letter from one of his own officers, that his guns would reach beyond the centre of Charleston.

What was the matter? Beauregard must have thought the government officers both fools and cowards. When his own boats were sailing unharmed about the harbor, between Sumter and Moultrie, bearing his orders, was it possible that the forces outside could stand apathetic while a brave garrison was being done to death? When the battle was to the death, would a shrewd officer neglect to divert his enemie's attention by firing his city?

If it seemed mysterious to us, waiting on Saturday with breathless suspense, it must have seemed incomprehensible to any cool head in the traitor camp.

Still no ships came in—and in fact the reports state that only three or four small vessels remained in the offing. After forty hours cannonade, on which not one man is killed, Major Anderson, an officer of undoubted courage and honor, runs up a white flag, surrenders the fort, and becomes the guest of General Beauregard. Let no man hastily cry traitor! He only obeyed his orders. He made an honorable distance. He took care to shed no blood. He knew orders not to fight men, but to silence batteries".

Meantime, while the rebels are ignorantly glorifying the victory of five thousand men over eighty, what news comes from Montgomery? The telegraph, in the hands of the rebels, says:

"Fort Pickens was re-inforced last night."

"It is understood that Charleston harbor is blockaded."

Despatches from Lieutenant Slemmer, captured by the rebels, gave Davis the first intimation of his defeat! No wonder the rebel chief was "sick," and went to bed! No wonder that his secretary, Walker, declined to make a speech.

And what from Washington? Terse significant paragraphs:

"The report that Anderson has surrendered, and is the guest of General Beauregard, has been communicated to the President. The latter was not surprised; but, on the contrary, remarked, 'The supply vessels would not reach him, and he did right.' When he was told that the report was that nobody was injured in Fort Sumter, he seemed very much gratified; and remarked that he regretted that Major Anderson could not be supplied, as that was all he needed.

"The next act in the play will represent a scene of Fort Pickens, in Pensacola harbor."

The position of affairs is this: Charleston is blockaded. Fort Pickens is re-inforced by troops which the traitors foolishly believed were destined for Sumter. Washington is secure beyond peradventure. The traitors have, without the slightest cause, opened the war they have so long threatened. The country is roused to defend its assailed liberties, and gathers enthusiastically about the government; and treason has been checkmated at the first blow it struck. Let them keep Sumter a few weeks.

Let no man cry traitor to Major Anderson! Let no man fear for the energy of the Administration. Let us thank God that brave old General Scott remains to give his loyal heart and wise head to his country's service!

Catheusiem.

The treachery of Twiggs and its effect upon the army of the Southwest, present a striking illustration of the influence which false political teachings, pursued through a course of years, may have upon the minds of its pupils. To Northern officers Twiggs' conduct could have but one aspect—that of damning treason, and treachery as mean and degrading to the perpetrator as it was injurious to the public weal. But the minds of many Southern officers had been prepared for it by the insidious inculcation of the Calhoun doctrine, that an officer's duty to his State is paramount to that owed to the Federal Government under his oath. Few Southern officers have gone the entire length anticipated by their unscrupulous political teachers, who in putting forth their dogmas intended that their teachings should culminate in the delivery of the entire army over to the seceding South, whenever they, as Southern politicians, desired its services. The military education of the officers has debased their plan in part; but while it has spared the army the disgrace of wholesale treason—Calhoun has so sapped the loyalty of many a Southern soldier, as to make him look at least with lenient eye on such an act as was the disgraceful surrender of Twiggs. The future historian, while stamping with the seal of inaffiable disgrace, those who like Twiggs have shamelessly repudiated their oaths and obligations to support the flag, will also point to the teachings of Calhoun as the moral virus which poisoned the hearts and judgments of many a gallant man, and led him to abandon his service of the country, from false ideas of duty; just when fidelity and firmness are needed most.

TO BUSINESS MEN.—Another chance for all reliable business men to become a permanent successful agent for the sale of a staple article in all families and private houses. The manufacturers intend in the application of a peculiar composition of sand to combine cast metals, and a variety of other building materials, ornamental architectural finishings, castings ready for fixture and for roofing.

This material may be fitted to all colors from the purest white to the deepest black, with all the colors and shades between. At present by no chemistries on which it is supplied a hardness and durability almost indestructible, and a beauty surpassing that of the purest and most costly of the variegated marbles and, unlike them, is inexpensive to the consumer, and will never fade, stain or deteriorate, rendering but a fractional part of the price of ordinary marble.

It is also valuable for table and mantel tops, manufactories, monuments, road sub-soil, and a variety of other articles for simple use. The process of applying the enamel is simple, while the article enamelled will command a ready sale, affording large profits. Responsible parties may procure licenses for manufacturing under the patent for any city or prominent town in the United States, by applying to the subscriber. A small tariff on the articles manufactured will be required for the use of the invention. Circulars giving full particulars will be forwarded to all applicants.

The superior merit and beauty of this enamelled building material to anything in use has the unqualified indorsements of many of the most eminent architects and scientific men of this and other cities. For particulars address

NEW

TESTIMONY!

From the Rev. Father Stanislaus Partyngton:—I have been troubled with Deafness for a length of time, and on consulting Dr. VON MOSCHZISKER. He operated on my ears so successfully as to restore my hearing entirely. I think it, in justice, my duty to those afflicted with deafness and hearing, as well as in acknowledgment of the Doctor's great skill not talent, to make my case publicly known, and to strongly recommend all sufferers to avail themselves of this rare opportunity.

STANISLAUS PARHYBRENT, Pastor.

MONASTERY, Birmingham, April 11th, 1861.

This is to certify that I have suffered for some time from Deafness, and that I have been greatly benefited by the skillful treatment of Dr. VON MOSCHZISKER.

ALOYSIUS GRUGO, Pastor.

MONASTERY, Birmingham, April 11th, 1861.

Most Important to the Deaf!

Testimonials from Home Sources!

From John McCluskey, Esq.

(Of the Firm of M'Cluskey, Cosgrave & Co.)

POST FREE, Allegheny co., April 8th, 1861.

To DR. VON MOSCHZISKER, 155 Third st., Pittsburgh:

I am happy to inform you that my little daughter, who has been quite deaf for four years, has, under your skillful treatment, entirely recovered. I feel satisfied that her hearing would never have been restored by natural causes, but to your ability alone is she indebted for it, and I would most earnestly recommend all afflicted with Deafness to consult you at once.

Respectfully yours, JOHN M'CLOSKEY.

ALLEGHENY, April 8th, 1861.

DR. VON MOSCHZISKER—Dear Sir: It is but justice that my gratitude for the relief experienced from your skillful treatment should have expression. For some time past my hearing had been so bad that I despaired of ever regaining it, though the advice of several physicians was strictly followed. I am therefore truly grateful to you, and very happy to say that the operation performed by you has resulted in the perfect restoration of my hearing. ROBERT HUNTER.

We are personally acquainted with Mr. Hunter, and have perfect confidence in his statement. He is under our supervision, in the employ of G. & R. R. R. Co.

TERRITORY FOR SALE.

THE "EUREKA RED-RIVE."

Patented July 30, 1850, is now offered to the public confident of its superiority over any other in use.

PREMIUM AND DIPLOMA AWARDED

by the Allegheny County Agricultural Society, September, 1860. The rides are movable, enabling the operator to remove them at any time containing the Corn and replace them in their exact position, without injury to either Corn or Rider. The Corn is dropped in check rows, and cultivated at all times an abundant supply of fresh air to the roots of the plant. The operation of planting is all done by the Rider. The machine is simple in construction, durable, and not liable to get out of order. Instruction will be given to purchasers in the method of using the machine. Price, $15 per piece. Territory for sale in Jefferson county, Ohio, which is claimed by the inventor as an infringement upon his rights.

Territorial or farm rights, $25; Riders, $20; Single rights to use and attach of Rider, $10. Parties wishing to purchase, or to see the machine in operation, will please call on or address

W. H. GUNNELL,
