MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 29.

The Resources of a Fight.

There are still in the North shy who hesitate about the propriety of effective measures to support the Government, and who fear and tremble lest a collision of arms is to render a reconstruction of the Union between the North and South impossible. It would do them good if that sentiment is expressed by Southern gentlemen in this neighborhood—men who know the South, and who have independence enough to express their views freely and without stint. I remember that during the late session of Congress, an outspoken and honest Southern member, conversing with a number from New England with respect to the disturbances between the sections, remarked:

"It's no going to have a fight with you, and somebody's going to get hurt; but after that we shall like each other better than we ever have since the foundation of the Government."

It seems that at the time it did seem as though the mode suggested was rather a rough one of reconciliation to good fellowship; but in the light of to-day with another Southern, he expressed the same idea, in a form of argument which he carried with it great force. "The masses of our people," he said, "don't understand the people of the North. You don't fight dunks, nor do varies other things which Southern education holds to be indispensable to a reputation for courage. They have consequently settled down into the conviction that Yankees are cowards—and while they despise them for that, they hate them also because they don't give them opportunity for more violent demonstrations upon their persons. They don't respect the people of the North—and so they don't believe Northern men when they disclaim any purpose of opposing the South, and of interfering with slavery in the States. Cowardice they look upon as the quintessence of meanness—and lying they consider its natural companion. Hence it is, that they refuse to give the North credit for an honest motive in its Anti-Slavery sentiments, and hence they believe the demagogues, who profess to see nothing in your humility, to slavery extension except an offensive purpose to humiliate the South, and to bring it to subsidiary in the Union. Now we have all about to have a conflict; they will learn that Northern people are not cowards, but as brave and determined as themselves. The knowledge of that fact will inspire them with respect for you, give them confidence in your truth, and make us all better friends than the two sections ever can be until they have each learned, by a stern experience, that the other is worthy of respect and confidence."

There certainly is wisdom and sound logic in the argument,—and if the dread trial by the sword must come, there is some consolation in the anticipation that good will ultimately flow from the evil.—N. Y. Times' Cor.

Lincoln and the Country.

A correspondent sends us an extract from a speech made by Abraham Lincoln in 1840, during the great political campaign of that year. He had been holding a debate with Messrs. Douglas and Lamborn, and in reply to a remark of the latter that they were sure of victory, Mr. Lincoln said:

"The probability that we may fall in the struggle, ought not to deter us from the support of a cause, which we deem to be just: it shall not deter me. If ever I feel the soul within me elevate and expand to those dimensions not wholly unworthy of its Almighty Architect, it is when I contemplate the cause of my country, deserted by all the world besides, and I standing up boldly and alone, and hurling defiance at her victorious oppressors. Here, without contemplating consequences, before high Heaven, and in the face of the world, I swear eternal fidelity to the just cause, as I deem it, of the land of my life, my liberty, and my love. And who, that thinks with me, will not fearlessly adopt the oath that I take. Let none falter, who thinks he is right, and we may succeed. But, if after all we shall fall, be it so. We shall have the proud consolation of saying to our conscience, and to the departed shade of our country's freedom, that the course approved by our judgment and adored by our hearts in disaster, in chains in torture, in death, we never faltered in defending."

This was language worthy even of the present emergency. It indicates a patriotic devotion to the welfare of the country, which should inspire confidence in the man who uttered it, and who is now the leader of the nation in its struggle for the preservation of its existance.—[N. Y. Times.

The First Victory.

The first victory of the war—the act of most importance thus far, and that to which Washington probably owes, and will owe, its safety—is undoubtedly the coup of Capt. Jones at Harper's Ferry. Treason was systematically at work in Virginia, incited, planned and carried out by such men as Wise, Mason and Hunter, with the complicity of Gov. Letcher, all the time that decoy Convention was plotting over plans of adjustment, "ultimatums," and schemes to lull the suspicions and delay the preparations of the North to guard against danger. A leading feature of the conspiracy was the theft of Harper's Ferry, as a means of arming the ten thousand men who were to concentrate there, and by the Baltimore and Ohio railway, attack Washington in the rear. The masterly movement of Capt. Jones effectually defeated this well-laid scheme. The traitors are at Harper's Ferry, without arms; and consequently unable to carry out their part of the programme. Meantime the great North has "shaken the dew drops from its mane," and while the traitors are gnashing their teeth in disappointment, the Northern hosts are moving in a steady phalanx to the defence of the Federal Capital. All honor to the wise foresight and decision of Capt. Jones, the first real hero of the war.—[N. Y. Tribune.

☞ ANOTHER CURE BY DR. SCHENCK.—I called on Dr. Schenck some time ago to one of his visits to Pittsburgh, at the office of Dr. Keyser, No. 140 Wood st. He was examining patients with lung disease. One of my sons, at that time, had a bad cough, and I was fearful of consumption. Oftentimes when I coughed I expectorated blood and matter in large quantities. I had eight events and a half of hemorrhage. My physician established a Dr. Schenck prescribed for me his "PULMONIC SYRUP," "SEAWEED TONIC" and "MANDRAKE PILLS," and, after taking the same month and a half or more, found that I do not throw any more blood or matter, and the cough has nearly left me. I live in Columbiana county, Unity township, Ohio, where I am well known. You may publish this if you wish.

MARTIN KOCH.

Pittsburgh, August 27, 1860.

Dr. Schenck's office hours are strictly. He can be seen at his principal office in Philadelphia every Saturday, from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Seaweed Tonic and Mandrake Pills are for sale by all druggists.

☞ I, WILLIAM W. ALEXANDER, residing on Ann street, Allegheny city, do hereby certify that I have been a sufferer from severe cough and pain in the breast for about eight years. During the whole of this time I have had general debility and expression of spirits. I tried every remedy I could hear of, but nothing took hold of my disease. I heard of Doctor Schenck's "PULMONIC SYRUP," and having formerly had it in bad cases, I had no confidence in it. In April, 1859, I took a severe cold, accompanied with a violent cough, difficulty of respiration, and night sweats, which prostrated me that I was confined to my room for two months.

A friend of mine would've called to see me, spoke in very high praise, as they knew what it had done. My prostrated condition die encouraged me considerably, and I made up my mind to try it, as no other remedy for disease of the kind would take the cheapest, late or die, as I had been so long sick that I felt completely discouraged. However, with the blessing of God and confidence in the "Pulmonic Syrup" I felt induced to give Dr. Schenck's medicine a fair trial, and now, nearly two years afterwards, I am in good health, and taking the same care of myself. I consider myself cured. I unhesitatingly state that it has made a perfect cure of me. I am well as can be, and I attribute my good health and vigor of constitution entirely to Dr. Schenck's medicine. I enjoy better health to day, Feb. 6th, 1861, than I have done for twenty years past. If I person knew of the value of Dr. Schenck's inestimable remedies, they would not hesitate to call on him in the city of Philadelphia every week to get one bottle, if not more, of his medicines. Any person wishing to know further as to how stated can call on me at my place of business, at 99 M. Faber's, Machinist, in this city, or at my residence, Ann street, Allegheny city.
