WHO ARE IN A HURRY?

No man proposes the perpetuation of our exclusion of Southern States and people for [illegible] to party politics. On the 8th of February last the Senate of Pennsylvania, by universal [illegible] declared by a majority [illegible] Senate, by a majority [illegible] Since the declaration was made [illegible] not a man has been proposed for [illegible] has since been put on his trial for that offence. Not a single [illegible] The little persons are allowed to speak and [illegible] their hostility to the Government and to the [illegible] loyal citizens, with a coldness and an acerbity never before heard of, under the like circumstances, in any other nation.

As to the present time and under what conditions this restoration shall be consummated, there is room for diversity of judgment. But as many cogent reasons exist for some further postponement, and for certain Constitutional [illegible] that in view of [illegible] that a decisive try should be [illegible] Latin of it arises—Who are they who are in a hurry?

STATE POLITICS.

[illegible] The republican [illegible] Philadelphia [illegible] a grand demonstration [illegible] Congress.

SCENES AT THE WASHINGTON MEETING.

Notwithstanding the names of Senators DOOLITTLE and DIXON, and other Republicans who were supposed to favor the veto, were announced as speakers in the call for the Washington meeting on the 22d, to sustain the President, not one of them attended. The speaking was all done by the Copperheads. SUNSET COX was there, TOM FLORENCE and MASON, HOGAN, of Missouri, KINNEY, of Nebraska, SHARP, the counsel of WIRZ, MONTGOMERY BLAIR, HENDRICKS, of Indiana, ROGERS, of New Jersey, BAYER and SIBOLSKY, of Pennsylvania, SAULSBURY, of Delaware, McDOUGAL, of California, and VOORHEES, of Indiana and intense copperheads—these were all there, [illegible] a single Republican.

The meeting was held at GROVER'S Theatre, and when it was through, adjourned to the White House, when the President made the speech that sounds so much like the classical inspirations of ISAIAH RANDERS, of the scene which occurred when the President appeared, the Washington Chronicle says:

The President shortly appeared, preceded by Messrs. Aiken and Clampitt, (counsel for Mrs. Surratt and the conspirators,) the former of whom stepped briskly up on the wall separating the portico from the carriage way outside, and proposed three cheers, which were cheerfully given. Among those who attended Mr. Johnson's became out were Messrs. T. B. Florence, J. F. Coyne and ex- Mayor Berret, who kept close behind him, anxious to render any little service in their power, in assisting him to mount on the wall above mentioned; from which he spoke. As the President was just about to commence speaking, quite a commotion occurred in front, apparently caused by some one forcing his way through the crowd at a somewhat rapid pace. Watching the edge as it floated along toward the western extremity of the assemblage, we at last observed a negro who appeared to have been ejected in a somewhat summary manner, but for what reason we did not ascertain.

The Chronicle also details another [illegible] worth noting:

"While the crowd were surging to and fro in front of the White House, waiting for the President to come out, John Wentworth, who was in front, and next to the soldier guard, was pitched back rather unceremoniously by the soldier. He remonstrated quietly when a policeman came along and said he would arrest him, if he did it again. Mr. Wentworth said he had not [illegible] and he would if he did not keep quiet. Mr. Wentworth replied that he could not keep quiet, and he dared not arrest him. With a toss of his head, he said, 'I am a member of Congress, and don't you want to know it.' Just then one of Mrs. Surratt's counsel made his way inside of the guard, and [illegible] the doorway, when he more particularly [illegible]
