

MONDAY, MARCH 12, 1866.

CITY AND SUBURBAN.

FROM SATURDAY EVENING'S GAZETTE.

Photographs from Ambrotypes. If except the printing process, no branch of art or science has made such rapid strides in improvement and perfection as the daguerrotype. Twenty years ago, the art of photography was in its infancy, and pictures were taken, requiring the sitter to hold his breath and stand motionless for a few moments. Now, the camera is so improved, and the process so perfected, that a picture can be taken in a few moments, and the subject need not stand for a moment.
