

CITY ITEMS.

WILL CONGRESS ACT?
Congress has acted twice during the present session, on matters of consequence to a proper readjustment of the Union. In each case its action was calm and deliberate. In both instances great energy was exerted in its favor by the President. He was consulted. The measures were so framed as to meet his approval. Further modifications would certainly have been made to secure his cooperation. He gave assurance that he was satisfied. Yet, as soon as those bills were passed, he applied the veto. With what grace can the veto be applied, in the case of a bill which is approved by the President, and which has passed the House of Representatives? The President has placed himself in a position that neither Congress nor the people can take advantage of. Of what avail is it for Congress to adopt measures to suit the declared purpose of the Executive, so long as his habit is to say what he does not mean?

REJOICING OVER CONNECTICUT.

On the 1st of an immense meeting was held at Hartford, Conn., to express gratification at the result of the Connecticut election. Gen. Curtis presided. Hon. Lewis W. Hall, Hon. J. D. Foster, Hon. Rowland T. Hoopes, Hon. M. L. Lewis—all members of the Senate—made speeches. The resolutions, four in number, have the right tone. The first declares that the people of Connecticut are proud of the result of the election. The second pledges Pennsylvania to support Gen. Curtis. The third declares that President Johnson is "so far from the confidence of those who love their country as to be unworthy of the office." The fourth declares that the people of Connecticut are proud of the result of the election.
